[TITLE IX—COMMERCIAL REUSABLE IN-SPACE TRANSPORTATION]

[SEC. 901. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Commercial Reusable In-Space Transportation Act of 2002”.]

[SEC. 902. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) It is in the national interest to encourage the production of cost-effective, in-space transportation systems, which would be built and operated by the private sector on a commercial basis.

(2) The use of reusable in-space transportation systems will enhance performance levels of in-space operations, enhance efficient and safe disposal of satellites at the end of their useful lives, and increase the capability and reliability of existing ground-to-space launch vehicles.

(3) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems will enhance the economic well-being and national security of the United States by reducing space operations costs for commercial and national space programs and by adding new space capabilities to space operations.

(4) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems will provide new cost-effective space capabilities (including orbital transfers from low altitude orbits to high altitude orbits and return, the correction of erroneous satellite orbits, and the recovery, refurbishment, and refueling of satellites) and the provision of upper stage functions to increase ground-to-orbit launch vehicle payloads to geostationary and other high energy orbits.

(5) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems can enhance and enable the space exploration of the United States by providing lower cost trajectory injection from earth orbit, transit trajectory control, and planet arrival deceleration to support potential National Aeronautics and Space Administration missions to Mars, Pluto, and other planets.

(6) Satellites stranded in erroneous earth orbit due to deficiencies in their launch represent substantial economic loss to the United States and present substantial concerns for the current backlog of national space assets.

(7) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems can provide new options for alternative planning approaches and risk management to enhance the mission assurance of national space assets.

(8) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems developed by the private sector can provide in-space transportation services to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Department of Defense, the National Reconnaissance Office, and other agencies without the need for the United States to bear the cost of production of such systems.

(9) The availability of loan guarantees, with the cost of credit risk to the United States paid by the private-sector, is an effective means by which the United States can help qualifying private-sector companies secure otherwise unattainable private financing for the production of commercial reusable in-space transportation systems, while at the same time minimizing Government commitment and involvement in the development of such systems. ]

[SEC. 903. LOAN GUARANTEES FOR PRODUCTION OF COMMERCIAL REUSABLE IN-SPACE TRANSPORTATION.

(a) AUTHORITY TO MAKE LOAN GUARANTEES.—The Secretary may guarantee loans made to eligible United States commercial providers for purposes of producing commercial reusable in-space transportation services or systems.

(b) ELIGIBLE UNITED STATES COMMERCIAL PROVIDERS.—The Secretary shall prescribe requirements for the eligibility of United States commercial providers for loan guarantees under this section. Such requirements shall ensure that eligible providers are financially capable of undertaking a loan guaranteed under this section.

(c) LIMITATION ON LOANS GUARANTEED.—The Secretary may not guarantee a loan for a United States commercial provider under this section unless the Secretary determines that credit would not otherwise be reasonably available at the time of the guarantee for the commercial reusable in-space transportation service or system to be produced utilizing the proceeds of the loan.

(d) CREDIT SUBSIDY.—

(1) COLLECTION REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall collect from each United States commercial provider receiving a loan guarantee under this section an amount equal to the amount, as determined by the Secretary, to cover the cost, as defined in section 502(5) of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, of the loan guarantee.

(2) PERIODIC DISBURSEMENTS.—In the case of a loan guarantee in which proceeds of the loan are disbursed over time, the Secretary shall collect the amount required under this subsection on a pro rata basis, as determined by the Secretary, at the time of each disbursement.

(e) OTHER TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—

(1) PROHIBITION ON SUBORDINATION.—A loan guaranteed under this section may not be subordinated to another debt contracted by the United States commercial provider concerned, or to any other claims against such provider.

(2) RESTRICTION ON INCOME.—A loan guaranteed under this section may not—

(A) provide income which is excluded from gross income for purposes of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

(B) provide significant collateral or security, as determined by the Secretary, for other obligations the income from which is so excluded.

(3) TREATMENT OF GUARANTEE.—The guarantee of a loan under this section shall be conclusive evidence of the following:

(A) That the guarantee has been properly obtained.

(B) That the loan qualifies for the guarantee.

(C) That, but for fraud or material misrepresentation by the holder of the loan, the guarantee is valid, legal, and enforceable.

(4) OTHER TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may establish any other terms and conditions for a guarantee of a loan under this section, as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the financial interests of the United States.

(f) ENFORCEMENT OF RIGHTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General may take any action the Attorney General considers appropriate to enforce any right accruing to the United States under a loan guarantee under this section.

(2) FORBEARANCE.—The Attorney General may, with the approval of the parties concerned, forbear from enforcing any right of the United States under a loan guaranteed under this section for the benefit of a United States commercial provider if such forbearance will not result in any cost, as defined in section 502(5) of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, to the United States.

(3) UTILIZATION OF PROPERTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to the terms of a loan guaranteed under this section, upon the default of a United States commercial provider under the loan, the Secretary may, at the election of the Secretary—

(A) assume control of the physical asset financed by the loan; and

(B) complete, recondition, reconstruct, renovate, repair, maintain, operate, or sell the physical asset.

(g) CREDIT INSTRUMENTS.—

Grants to local educational agencies.—Funds are allocated through four formulas—Basic Grants, Concentration Grants, Targeted Grants and Education Finance Incentive Grants—for local programs that provide extra academic support to help raise the achievement of eligible students in high-poverty communities, or, in the case of schoolwide programs, help all students in high-poverty schools to meet challenging State academic standards. States must annually assess participating students in at least reading and mathematics, and school districts must identify for improvement, and provide assistance to, schools that for two consecutive years fail to make adequate yearly progress toward helping all groups of students reach the proficient level on the State assessments. Districts must provide students attending such schools the choice of attending another public school that is not identified for improvement. After three years of failure, students who remain in the school would be permitted to use Title I funds to obtain supplemental educational services from a public- or private-sector provider. Schools that continue to fail to meet State standards would be subject to progressively stonger corrective actions and, after six years of failure, reconstitution under a restructuring plan.

Reading first State grants.—Funds provide assistance to State and local educational agencies in establishing reading programs for students in grades K–3 that are grounded in scientifically based reading research, in order to ensure that every student can read at grade level or above by the end of third grade.

Early reading first.—Funds provide assistance to support local efforts, through competitive grants, to enhance the school readiness of young children, particularly those from low-income families, through scientific, research-based strategies and professional development that are designed to enhance the verbal skills, phonological awareness, letter knowledge, pre-reading skills, and early language development of children ages three through five.

Even start.—Funds support formula grants to States, which award grants for local projects to partnerships of local educational agencies and other organizations to operate projects integrating early childhood education, adult literacy, parenting education, and interactive literacy activities between parents and their children into “family literacy” programs for low-income families with children under age eight.

Literacy through school libraries.—Funds support competitive grants to local educational agencies to provide students with increased access to up-to-date school library materials and professional certified library media specialists.

State agency migrant program.—Funds support formula grants to States for educational services to children of migratory farmworkers and fishers, with resources and services focused on children who have moved within the past 36 months.

State agency neglected and delinquent program.—Funds support formula grants to States for educational services to children and youth under age 21 in State neglected, delinquent, or adult correction facilities.

Evaluation.—Funds support national activities to evaluate Title I programs and a national assessment of Title I’s effectiveness in helping States, school districts, and schools raise the overall achievement of disadvantaged students and narrow the achievement gap. A portion of funds would support technical assistance to help States and local educational agencies carry out Part A of Title I.

Migrant education projects.—Funds support grants to institutions of higher education and other nonprofit agencies that assist migrant students to earn a high school equivalency certificate or to complete their first year of college.

Impact Aid helps to replace the lost local revenue that would otherwise be available to educate federally connected children. The presence of certain students living on Federal property, such as students who are military dependents or who reside on Indian lands, can place a financial burden on local educational agencies that educate them. The property on which the children live and their parents work is exempt from local property taxes, denying local educational agencies access to the primary source of revenue used by most communities to finance education.

Basic support payments.—Payments will be made on behalf of approximately 270,000 federally connected students enrolled in about 750 local educational agencies to assist them in meeting their operation and maintenance costs. Average per-student payments will be approximately $3,200.

Payments for Children with Disabilities.—Payments in addition to those provided under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act will be provided on behalf of approximately 35,000 federally connected students with disabilities in about 740 local educational agencies. Average per-student payments will be approximately $1,140.

Facilities maintenance.—Funds are used to provide emergency repairs for school facilities that serve military dependents and are owned by the Department of Education. Funds are also used to transfer the facilities to local educational agencies.

Construction.—Formula payments will be provided to approximately 170 local educational agencies with large proportions of federally connected students. Payments will be made on behalf of about 140,000 students who are military dependents or who reside on Indian lands. In addition, approximately 25 construction grants will be awarded competitively to local educational agencies.

Payments for Federal Property.—Payments are made to approximately 250 local educational agencies in which real property owned by the Federal Government represents 10 percent or more of the assessed value of real property in the local educational agency.

Vocational rehabilitation State grants.—The basic State grants program provides Federal matching funds to State vocational rehabilitation (VR) agencies to assist individuals with physical or mental impairments to become gainfully employed. Services are tailored to the specific needs of the individual. Priority is given to serving those with the most significant disabilities. Current law requires that between 1.0 percent and 1.5 percent of the funds appropriated for the VR State grants program be set aside for Grants for Indians in 2004.

The table below presents national data on selected performance measures for the VR State grants program. The data are based on the number of individuals whose service records were closed in fiscal years 2000 (377,170) and 2001 (385,235).

CONSUMER OUTCOMES (CASES CLOSED)

Percent with significant disabilities .....	87.0%	88.0%
Employment outcomes as a percent all of individuals receiving services .....	62.6%	60.7%

The 2004 budget request reflects a multi-year Administration effort to reform job training programs, target resources to programs with documented effectiveness, and eliminate funding for duplicative and overlapping programs. Consistent with this crosscutting reform, the budget consolidates funding for three programs in this account (Supported Employment State Grants, Projects with Industry, and the Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers program) within the Vocational Rehabilitation State Grants program.

Vocational rehabilitation incentive grants.—Incentive grants will be used to encourage State VR agencies to improve their performance in helping individuals with disabilities obtain competitive employment. Grants will be awarded to State VR agencies based on program performance. The Administration plans to carry out 2004 activities with any remaining 2003 funds.

Client assistance State grants.—Formula grants are made to States to provide assistance in informing and advising clients and applicants of benefits available under the Rehabilitation Act and, if requested, to pursue legal or administrative remedies to ensure the protection of the rights of individuals with disabilities.

Training.—Grants are made to States and public or non-profit agencies and organizations, including institutions of higher education, to increase the number of skilled personnel available for employment in the field of rehabilitation and to upgrade the skills of those already employed.

Demonstration and training programs.—Grants are made for programs that expand and improve the provision of rehabilitation services or that further the purposes of the Rehabilitation Act.

Protection and advocacy of individual rights.—Formula grants are made to State protection and advocacy systems to protect the legal and human rights of individuals with disabilities.

Independent living.—Grants are awarded to States and non-profit agencies to assist individuals with significant disabilities in their achievement of self-determined independent living goals. Grants are also awarded to provide support services

VOCATIONAL AND ADULT EDUCATION

(Legislative proposal, not subject to PAYGO)

The resources in this schedule are proposed for later transmittal under proposed legislation to reform the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technical Education Act of 1998 (Perkins) and the Adult Education and Family Literacy Act (AEFLA). The reforms would promote stronger accountability for results by linking grantee funding to success in achieving student outcomes.

Secondary and technical education.—The proposed reforms to Perkins would create a coordinated high school and technical education improvement program. The program would support and extend the goals of Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) by requiring States and LEAs to focus more intensively on improving student outcomes, such as academic achievement, and ensuring that students are being taught the necessary skills to make successful transitions from high school to college and college to the workforce. States would reserve a portion of their formula allocations to, among other things, implement assessments consistent with ESEA Title I accountability requirements to track academic performance and ensure that high school students are graduating with the necessary proficiency in core academic areas. States would have the flexibility to transfer funds to support education-related activities under ESEA Title I. States would also make competitive grants to community and technical colleges to help raise student academic achievement and provide students with high-quality training leading to successful employment outcomes.

Adult literacy.—The proposal would amend the current statute to increase the focus on building stronger skills in basic reading, math, and English acquisition for adults who need to strengthen weak literacy skills or want to earn their high school diploma or its recognized equivalent (the GED). Proposed amendments would revise current accountability provisions to create specific local accountability requirements for demonstrating student gains in reading, math, and English language acquisition, with rewards for high performing programs. Each State would develop and implement educational standards to guide local programs in creating a clear sequence of adult literacy activities leading to high school-level proficiency. The proposal would require that teachers be trained in the use of research-validated instructional practices in reading, math and English fluency, and that programs integrate the use of technology-facilitated learning to accelerate student learning. In addition, the proposal would strengthen employer partnerships and the participation of community- and faith-based organizations to expand availability of essential reading, math, and English acquisition instruction, particularly for low-wage working adults.

The College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans Program and the Historically Black College and University Capital Financing Program are administered separately, but are consolidated for presentation purposes.

College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans Program.—Funds for this activity pay the Federal costs for administering the College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans (CHAFL), College Housing Loans (CHL), and Higher Education Facilities Loans (HEFL) programs. Prior to 1994, these programs provided financing for the construction, reconstruction, and renovation of housing, academic, and other educational facilities. Although no new loans have been awarded since fiscal year 1993, costs for administering the outstanding loans will remain through 2030.

Historically Black College and University Capital Financing Program.—The Historically Black College and University (HBCU) Capital Financing Program provides HBCUs with access to capital financing for the repair, renovation, and construction of classrooms, libraries, laboratories, dormitories, instructional equipment, and research instrumentation. The Higher Education Amendments of 1992 granted the Department authority to enter into insurance agreements with a private for-profit Designated Bonding Authority to guarantee no more than $375,000,000 in outstanding principal and unpaid accrued interest combined. The bonding authority issues the loans and maintains an escrow account in which 5 percent of each institution's principal is deposited. This amount is estimated to be sufficient to cover all potential delinquencies and defaults. No subsidy appropriations are required. The 2004 budget provides funds for continuing Federal administrative activities only.

The Federal Financing Bank (FFB) purchases bonds issued by the HBCU Designated Bonding Authority. Under the policies governing Federal credit programs, bonds purchased by the FFB and supported by the Department of Education with a letter of credit create the equivalent of a Federal direct loan. HBCU bonds are also available for purchase by the private sector, and these will be treated as loan guarantees. However, the Department anticipates that all HBCU loans will be financed by the FFB.

The Administration's 2004 budget for the SFA account is $14.519 billion. Together with matching funds (less allowable administrative costs), this level of funding would provide nearly 7.5 million awards totalling more than $17 billion in available aid.

Federal Pell Grants.—Undergraduate students establish eligibility for these grants under award and need determination rules set out in the authorizing statute and the annual appropriations act.

The Administration proposes $12.715 billion for Pell Grants in the 2004 Budget.

In recent years, the number of Pell Grant recipients has grown much faster than historical trends would predict (as has college enrollment overall). Specifically, from 2000 to 2002, the number of Pell recipients increased by nearly 25 percent, compared with a 5 percent growth rate from 1997 to 1999. Much of this unanticipated increase was due to more independent students receiving Pell Grants (generally, independent students are older students who do not depend on their parent or guardian to pay for college). Many of these students attend community colleges and career training institutions and predominantly use Pell Grants and other student aid to help pay for job training or retraining. So, while Pell Grants remain the single largest source of grant aid for traditional college students, they are also the single largest source of federal support for persons in need of training or retraining for new careers.

As a result of this unexpected growth, as well as a $700 increase in the maximum grant from 2000 to 2002, Pell Grant appropriations for the past few years have been insufficient to fully cover annual program costs. This budget provides $12.7 billion for Pell Grants to retire the shortfall related to the 2002-2003 award year and maintain a $4,000 maximum award for the growing numbers of students eligible for Pell Grants.

As part of the Administration's efforts to keep the Pell Grant program on a solid financial foundation, the budget also proposes to allow the Internal Revenue Service to match income data on student aid applications with the applicant's tax data to ensure that students do not receive awards in excess of the amount for which they are eligible. This is one component of the Administration's effort to reduce erroneous payments government-wide. This proposal is projected to save $638 million in Pell Grant costs over 2003–2004, significantly reducing existing funding shortfalls.

Campus-based programs.—The Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, Federal Work-Study, and Federal Perkins Loan programs are called the "campus-based" programs because participating institutions are responsible for administering the programs on their own campuses. These programs provide aid administrators with considerable flexibility in the packaging of financial aid awards to best meet the needs of students.

Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG).—Federal funds are awarded by formula to qualifying institutions, which use these funds to award grants to undergraduate students. While institutions have discretion in awarding these funds, they are required to give priority to Pell Grant recipients and other students with exceptional need. The Federal share of such grants may not exceed 75 percent of the total grant. The Administration proposes $725 million for the SEOG program in 2004. This level of funding would provide approximately $918 million in available aid to an estimated 1.2 million needy students.

Federal Work-Study.—Federal funds are awarded by formula to qualifying institutions, which develop and provide part-time jobs for eligible undergraduate and graduate students with demonstrated need. Hourly earnings under the program must be at least equal to the Federal minimum wage. Federal funding in most cases pays 75 percent of a student's hourly wages, with the remaining 25 percent paid by the employer. The Administration proposes $1.011 billion for the Work-Study program, which will provide $1.2 billion in aid to over one million students.

Perkins Loan Program.—Institutions award low-interest loans from institutional revolving funds, which are comprised of Federal Capital Contributions, institutional matching funds, and student repayments on outstanding loans. The Administration proposes no new budget authority for the Perkins loan program in 2004. Repayments of existing Perkins Loans into Federal revolving funds held at institutions will continue to support more than $1 billion in new Perkins Loans in 2004. In addition, given the existence of the Federal Family Education Loan and Ford Direct Student Loan programs, as well as the current interest rate environment, including the statutory shift to a fixed rate of 6.8 percent for most student loans beginning in 2006, additional Federal capital contributions are not necessary to assure the availability of affordable aid for students.

Perkins Loan Program—Cancellations.—Under the Perkins Loan cancellation program, institutional revolving funds are reimbursed for indebtedness canceled as a result of a borrower engaging in certain public service activities, as specified in the Higher Education Act. Amendments to the Higher Education Act in 1992 and 1998 greatly expanded the number of borrowers with loans eligible for cancellation. The Administration's budget proposal for Perkins Loan cancellations is $67.5 million.

Funding Tables.—The following tables display student aid funds available, the number of aid awards, average awards, and the unduplicated count of recipients from any Federal student aid program. The tables include the aid from programs in the Student Financial Assistance account, as well as aid from the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program, and the William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan program.

Loan amounts reflect the capital actually loaned, not the Federal cost of those loans. The data in these tables include the effects of matching funds wherever applicable.

The Department of Education manages Federal student aid programs that will provide over $67 billion in Federal student aid grants and loans to over 8 million students and parents in 2004. Primary responsibility for administering these programs lies with the Office of Postsecondary Education and the performance-based Office of Student Financial Assistance (SFA). SFA was created by Congress in 1998 with a mandate to improve service to students and other student aid program participants, reduce the cost of student aid administration, and improve accountability and program integrity.

The Department's student aid administrative activities are funded from four main sources: (1) funds appropriated on a permanent basis under section 458 of the Higher Education Act; (2) a portion of the Department's general Program Administration funds; (3) a discretionary appropriation partially supporting administrative activities associated with the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program; and (4) permanent funds from the Direct Loan program subsidy account supporting the origination of Direct Consolidation Loans. Student aid administrative funds totaled $932 million in the 2003 President's Budget, $195 million of which supported the payment of account maintenance fees to FFEL guaranty agencies.

The budget for 2004 includes $947 million for student aid administration. In order to improve accountability and simplify program oversight and operations, the Administration is proposing to consolidate funding for student aid administrative activities into a single discretionary account. Funding levels for this account will be based on a workload-based methodology consistent with the goals of the performance-based organization.

The Higher Education Amendments of 1998 clarified that reserve funds held by public and non-profit guaranty agencies participating in the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program are Federal property. These reserves are used to pay default claims from FFEL lenders and fees to support agency efforts to successfully avert defaults. The Federal Government reimburses these reserves for default claim payments. In addition, optional borrower guarantee fees are deposited into the reserves (agencies may charge borrowers up to 1 percent of loan principal as a guarantee fee). The following schedules reflect the balances in these guaranty agency funds.

The Federal Government operates two major student loan programs: the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program—formerly the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) program—and the William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan (Direct Loan) program. For 2004, the President is committed to improving the efficiency of both programs and allowing individual institutions to choose which of these two programs best meets their needs and the needs of their students.

This summary section outlines the structure of these two programs, highlights their differences and similarities, and provides text tables displaying program cost data; loan volume, subsidy, default, and interest rates; and other descriptive information. As part of his 2004 budget, the President is proposing a change to the loan forgiveness provisions of the Direct Loan and FFEL programs. This proposal is discussed as part of this program description.

From its inception in 1965 through 2001, the FFEL program has provided over $347 billion in loans to postsecondary students and their parents. Since July 1, 1994, the Direct Loan program has provided $92 billion in new and consolidation loans to students and parents. Taken together, the FFEL and Direct Loan programs will make more than $44 billion in new loans available in 2003. Because funding for these two programs is provided on a permanent indefinite basis, for budget purposes they are considered separately from other Federal student financial assistance programs. The FFEL and Direct Loan programs should be viewed in combination with these other programs, however as part of the overall Federal effort to ensure access to higher education.

Loan capital in the FFEL program is provided by private lenders. State and private nonprofit guaranty agencies act as agents of the Federal Government, providing a variety of services including collection of some defaulted loans, default avoidance activities, and counseling to schools, students, and lenders. The Government provides substantial payments to these guaranty agencies. The Government also pays interest subsidies to lenders for certain borrowers, as well as most costs associated with loan defaults and other write-offs.

The Direct Loan program was created by the Student Loan Reform Act of 1993. Under this program, the Federal Government provides loan funds to postsecondary institutions directly or through an alternative originator. The Direct Loan program began operation in academic year 1994–1995 with 7 percent of overall loan volume and is expected to account for 30 percent in academic year 2002–2003. All eligible institutions are free to participate in either the Direct Loan or FFEL program.

The Direct Loan and FFEL programs share many basic elements. Each program offers four types of loans: Stafford, Unsubsidized Stafford, PLUS for parents, and Consolidation. Evidence of financial need is required for a student to receive a subsidized Stafford loan. The other three loan programs are available to borrowers at all income levels. Loans can be used only to meet qualified educational expenses.

The borrower interest rate for new Stafford Loans equals the 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 1.7 percent during in-school, grace, and deferment periods, and the 91-day Treasury bill plus 2.3 percent at all other times, with a cap of 8.25 percent, adjusted annually. Interest payments for these loans are fully subsidized by the Government while a student is in school and during grace and deferment periods. Unsubsidized Stafford loans carry the same borrower interest rate as Stafford loans, but have no interest subsidy. For new PLUS loans, the borrower interest rate equals the 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3.1 percent, with a cap of 9 percent and no interest subsidy.

In the FFEL program, lenders may receive an interest subsidy, called a special allowance, from the Government to ensure a guaranteed rate of return on their loans. Special allowance payments vary by loan type, are determined quarterly, and are based on current borrower interest rates and market-yield formulas. For new Stafford and Unsubsidized Stafford loans, for example, the Federal Government must pay lenders a special allowance if the average 3-month commercial paper rate for a given quarter plus 2.34 percent—or 1.74 percent during in-school, grace, or deferment periods—is higher than the current interest rate charged borrowers.

Consolidation loans allow borrowers to combine loans made under Title IV of the Higher Education Act—FFEL, Direct Loans, and Perkins Loans—as well as some loans made under the Public Health Service Act. The interest rate for new FFEL and Direct Consolidation loans equals the weighted average of the interest rate on the loans consolidated, rounded up to the nearest one-eighth of one percent. Lenders may choose to offer a lower rate. Interest rates for all new FFEL and Direct Consolidation Loans are capped at 8.25 percent.

FFEL borrowers pay an origination fee to the Government equal to 3 percent of principal, and are also liable for a guaranty agency insurance premium of up to 1 percent of principal. Guaranty agencies have the option of waiving this premium and FFEL lenders have the option of paying some or all of a borrower's origination fee for Stafford Loan borrowers. Direct Loan borrowers are charged an origination fee equal to 3 percent of principal, which partially offsets Federal program operation costs. Borrowers in both programs may be offered financial incentives to encourage prompt repayment.

Loan limits are also identical across the two programs. In addition, loans made under both programs are discharged when borrowers die, are totally and permanently disabled, or, under some circumstances, declare bankruptcy.

Under both programs, new borrowers after October 1, 1998, who are employed as teachers in schools serving low-income populations for five consecutive, complete school years, qualify for up to $5,000 in loan forgiveness. The Administration is proposing to increase this benefit to a maximum of $17,500 for mathematics, science, and special education teachers considered highly qualified under criteria established in the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001.

Borrowers under Direct Loans may choose from among five repayment plans including income-contingent repayment ("pay-as-you-can"), under which annual repayment amounts vary based on the income of the borrower and the amount borrowed, and payments can be made over 25 years. Borrowers may switch between repayment plans at any time. (Income-contingent repayment is not available to Direct PLUS borrowers).

FFEL borrowers may choose from among four repayment plans. Repayment periods under standard, graduated, and income-sensitive repayment may not exceed 10 years. An extended repayment plan of up to 25 years is available for new borrowers with outstanding loans totalling more than $30,000. FFEL borrowers may change repayment plans annually.

Student loan program administration activities are supported from a variety of sources, including a permanent appropriation authorized under Section 458 of the Higher Education Act, a small discretionary appropriation partially supporting FFEL program administration, a portion of funds appropriated under the Department's discretionary Program Administration account, and subsidy funds associated with the origination of Direct Consolidation Loans. In order to improve accountability and simplify the funding process for these administrative activities, the President is proposing to create a unified, discretionary Student Aid Administration account.

The following tables display performance indicators and program data; including projected overall Direct Loan and FFEL costs; loan volume, number of loans, and average loan amount; descriptive data, and program activity under the President's budget and legislative request.

<sup>1</sup>Subsidy rates represent the Federal portion of non-administrative costs—principally interest subsidies and defaults—associated with each borrowed dollar. For example, a $1,000 loan with Federal subsidy costs of $100 would have a subsidy rate of 10 percent.

<sup>2</sup>Default rates displayed in this table, which reflect projected defaults over the life of a loan cohort, are used in developing program cost estimates. The Department uses other rates based on defaults occurring in the first three years of repayment to determine institutional eligibility to participate in Federal loan programs. These three-year rates tend to be lower than those included in this table.

<sup>1</sup>For modeling purposes, all FFEL borrowers are assumed to have chosen Standard repayment. For Direct Loans, no data is included for the Alternative repayment plan, since borrowers are not expected to participate in this plan due to the flexibility available under the other options. Income-contingent repayment is not available for Direct PLUS borrowers.

<sup>2</sup>Percent of Loan Volume represents aggregate data. Individual borrowers may move between plans over time.

The Higher Education Amendments of 1998 broadened the availability of alternative repayment plans in the FFEL program. As noted in the table above, data on the extent to which FFEL borrowers will take advantage of these plans is not yet available.

Consistent with the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, the Office of Management and Budget establishes procedures for the estimation of subsidy rates for the Federal student loan programs. Subsidy costs for each loan type are estimated separately and, because costs can vary widely within a program depending on the characteristics of the individual borrower, cost estimates are aggregated from data for homogeneous groups within risk categories.

Risk categories for Stafford and Unsubsidized Stafford Loans are based on the type of school attended by the borrower. Since PLUS loan borrowers are all parents, they are assumed to share similar risk profiles and are grouped together in a single category. For Consolidation Loans, risk categories distinguish between standard Consolidation Loans—in which borrowers in repayment consolidate a number of outstanding loans—and loans consolidated out of default.

Default rates are a major cause of differences in subsidy between risk categories. The default rates in the following tables reflect estimates of the percent of borrowers who will default over the lifetime of the loans. These estimates are revised annually based on an analysis of default trends. Within each risk group, it is assumed that borrowers choosing similar repayment plans will have similar default rates, regardless of whether they borrow under the FFEL or Direct Loan program.

<sup>1</sup> This table represents explicit cash flows in the FFEL and Direct Loan financing accounts. Examples of these flows would include payments of FFEL interest benefits, default claims, and discharge claims, or collections on FFEL or Direct Loan defaults, all of which involve explicit events that are reflected in the Department's financial systems as they occur. Non-events, such as Direct Loan interest benefits, defaults, or discharges, involve payments that are not received, and hence not recorded in the Department's financial systems in the same way. For that reason, these non-events are not included in this table.

<sup>2</sup> For 2003, no funds are requested for loan administration, as these costs would be part of the proposed discretionary Student Aid Administration account.

<sup>3</sup> A number of expenses related to the administration of the student assistance programs are paid out of Student Aid Management funds. One of these expenses, account maintenance fee payments to guaranty agencies, is shown as a separate line.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this program account records the subsidy costs associated with Federal Family Education Loans (FFEL), formerly guaranteed student loans (GSL), committed in 1992 and beyond, as well as certain administrative expenses of the program. Administrative expenses include discretionary expenses for salaries, expenses and overhead of employees working directly on the program. Consistent with the Administration's proposal to consolidate student aid administrative activities in a single discretionary account, these expenses are not reflected for 2003 and 2004. For a discussion of this proposal, see the narrative description above in the Student Aid Administration account. Beginning with the 1993 cohort, mandatory administrative costs, specifically contract collection costs, are included in the FFEL subsidy estimates of each year's cohort. Subsidy amounts are estimated on a net present value basis. A description of the FFEL program and accompanying tables are included under the Federal Direct Student Loan program account.

Beginning in 2001, programs in the Weapons Activities appropriation have been managed by the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA).

Weapons activities provides for the maintenance and refurbishment of nuclear weapons to sustain confidence in their safety, reliability, and performance; expansion of scientific, engineering, and manufacturing capabilities to enable certification of the enduring nuclear weapons stockpile; and manufacture of nuclear weapon components under a comprehensive test ban. Weapons activities also provide for continued maintenance and investment in the Department's enterprise of nuclear stewardship, including maintaining the capability to return to the design and production of new weapons and to underground nuclear testing, if so directed by the President. The major elements of the program include the following:

Directed stockpile work.—Encompasses all activities that directly support specific weapons in the stockpile. These activities include maintenance and day-to-day care; planned refurbishment; reliability assessments; weapon dismantlement and disposal; and research, development, and certification technology efforts to meet future stockpile requirements.

Campaigns.—Focuses on scientific, technical and engineering efforts to develop and maintain critical capabilities and tools needed to support stockpile refurbishment and continued assessment and certification of the stockpile for the long term in the absence of underground nuclear testing.

Readiness in technical base and facilities (RTBF).—Provides the underlying physical infrastructure and operational readiness for the Directed Stockpile Work and Campaign activities. These activities include ensuring that facilities are operational, safe, secure, and compliant with regulatory requirements, and that a defined level of readiness is sustained at facilities funded by the Office of Defense Programs.

Facilities and infrastructure.—Focuses on a multi-year effort to restore physical infrastructure of the weapons complex. This activity provides funds to accomplish deferred maintenance and utilities replacement while improving facility management practices to preclude further deterioration.

Secure transportation asset.—Provides for the safe, secure movement of nuclear weapons, special nuclear material, and weapon components between military locations and nuclear complex facilities within the United States. Includes Program Direction funding for couriers.

Weapons Safeguards and Security.—Provides for all safeguard and security requirements (except for personnel security investigations) at NNSA landlord sites, specifically the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, Los Alamos National Laboratory, Sandia National Laboratories, the Nevada Test Site, Kansas City Plant, Pantex Plant, Y-12 Plant, and the Savannah River Site Tritium Facilities.

The mission of this program is to (1) prevent the spread of materials, technology, and expertise relating to weapons of mass destruction; (2) detect the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction worldwide; (3) provide for international nuclear safety, and (4) eliminate inventories of surplus fissile materials usable for nuclear weapons. The program addresses the danger that hostile nations or terrorist groups may acquire weapons of mass destruction or weapons-usable material, dual-use production technology or weapons of mass destruction expertise. In FY 2004, work will be done in the following major areas.

Nonproliferation and Verification Research and Development will conduct applied research, development, testing, and evaluation leading to prototype demonstrations and detection systems that strengthen the U.S. response to current and projected threats to national security and world peace posed by the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and diversion of special nuclear material. The program works directly with agencies responsible for monitoring proliferation and will increase the transition of technologies to organizations responsible for combating terrorism.

Nonproliferation and International Security efforts will control export of items and technology useful for weapons of mass destruction (WMD); implement international safeguards in conjunction with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA); monitor and implement treaties and agreements; develop and implement policy in support of international security efforts aimed at securing high-risk nuclear material; develop and implement transparency measures to assure that international nonproliferation and arms control agreements are in compliance, and that nuclear materials are secure; and explore and implement innovative approaches to improve regional security.

International Nuclear Materials Protection and Cooperation will continue to improve the security for nuclear material and weapons in Russia by installing basic rapid upgrades and through comprehensive security improvements. Reducing the potential for diversion of nuclear warheads and materials has been a critical priority for the United States. Since the recent terrorist attacks, Russia and the United States have agreed to expand cooperation in this area significantly to include increased emphasis on strategic rocket forces and radiological dispersion devices.

Russian Transition Assistance encompasses the efforts of the Initiatives for Proliferation Prevention (IPP) and the Nuclear Cities Initiative (NCI) programs to reduce the risk of adverse migration of former Soviet nuclear and other WMD expertise, and to work with the Russians in downsizing their nuclear weapons complex.

HEU Transparency Implementation will continue to work with Russia to provide confidence to the U.S. that the Russian highly enriched uranium (HEU) being converted is from its military stockpile. The 1993 U.S.-Russia HEU Purchase Agreement, which provides for Russian HEU to be down blended to non-weapons form and used to fuel reactors here in the United States, remains an extremely impressive non-proliferation achievement.

International Nuclear Safety and Cooperation strengthens national security by helping to prevent nuclear incidents and accidents at foreign nuclear facilities and, to mitigate the consequences of accidents should they occur. In FY 2003 the program will complete the Soviet-designed reactor safety program in Russia, which increased the operating safety of Soviet-designed nuclear power reactors and enhanced the resident safety culture. FY 2004 activities will address specific high-risk situations by continued cooperation with IAEA, the G8 and others on international nuclear safety and emergency cooperation issues.

Elimination of Weapons-Grade Plutonium Production Program enhances nuclear nonproliferation by assisting the Russian Federation in ceasing its production of weapons-grade plutonium production by providing replacement power production capacity.

Accelerated Materials Disposition efforts support the 2002 G8 summit initiatives to purchase Russian HEU above the amounts in the 1993 U.S.-Russia HEU Purchase Agreement. These additional amounts would be used to: (1) establish a reserve inventory of low enriched uranium for use as fuel in nuclear power reactors in the United States; (2) fuel five research reactors in the United States; (3) accelerate development of low enriched research reactor fuel designs, and (4) increase the amount of Russian HEU down-blended under the material consolidation and conversion program.

Fissile Materials Disposition conducts activities in both the United States and Russia to dispose of fissile materials that would pose a threat to the United States if acquired by hostile nations or terrorist groups. In FY 2004 it will continue transferring surplus HEU from the Y-12 Plant to the United States Enrichment Corporation; continue deliveries of off-specification HEU and low enriched uranium to TVA; begin site preparation and construction of the U.S. mixed oxide (MOX) fuel fabrication facility and purchase of long lead equipment; complete Title II design of the Pit Disassembly and Conversion Facility; begin construction of the Russian MOX fuel fabrication facility; fabricate U.S. and Russian MOX fuel lead assemblies, and publish final drafts of relevant licensing regulations.

2006 Accelerated Completions.—Provides funding for completing cleanup and closing down facilities contaminated as a result of nuclear weapons production. This account includes all geographic sites with an accelerated cleanup plan closure date of 2006 or earlier (such as Rocky Flats, Fernald and Mound). In addition, this account provides funding for Environmental Management (EM) sites where overall site cleanup will not be complete by 2006 but cleanup projects within a site (for example, spent fuel removal, all transuranic (TRU) waste shipped off-site) will be complete by 2006.

2012 Accelerated Completions.—Provides funding for completing cleanup and closing down facilities contaminated as a result of nuclear weapons production. This account includes all geographic sites with an accelerated cleanup plan closure date of 2007 through 2012 (such as Pantex and Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory—Site 300). In addition, this account provides funding for EM sites where overall site cleanup will not be complete by 2012 but cleanup projects within a site (for example, spent fuel removal and TRU waste shipped off-site) will be complete by 2012.

2035 Accelerated Completions.—Provides funding for completing cleanup and closing down facilities contaminated as a result of nuclear weapons production. This account provides funding for site closures and site specific cleanup and closure projects that are expected to be completed after 2012. EM has established a goal of completing cleanup at all its sites by 2035.

Safeguards and Security.—Provides funding to support safeguards and security required for sites at which EM has responsibility. This includes activities related to site-specific safeguards and security plans, facilities master security plans, cyber security plans, and personnel security programs at EM sites.

Technology Development and Deployment.—This program focuses on high priority technical needs at near-term closure sites and projects. In addition, the technology program will focus on identifying technical vulnerabilities and alternative solutions in support of EM's accelerated cleanup strategies.

The Department is pursuing several privatization initiatives for environmental management projects that will treat some of the most contaminated soil and highly radioactive waste in the complex, as well as deactivate contaminated nuclear facilities that are excess to Departments needs. In the 2004 budget, these activities will be funded in the Defense Site Acceleration Completion and Defense Environmental Services appropriations.

Non-Closure Environmental Activities.—Funds ongoing activities that indirectly support the Environmental Management accelerated cleanup and closure mission. These activities provide valuable support to other Departmental priorities and missions.

Community and Regulatory Support.—Funds activities that are indirectly related to on-the-ground cleanup results and are integral to EM's ability to conduct cleanup at sites (for example, Agreements in Principle with state regulators and tribal nations, and Site Specific Advisory Boards).

Program Direction.—Provides the funding necessary for oversight and management functions for the EM program, including federal salaries and benefits, travel, and other costs.

Federal Contribution to the Uranium Enrichment Decontamination and Decommissioning (D&D) Fund.—Funds the Federal Government contribution to the Uranium Enrichment D&D Fund, as required by the Energy Policy Act of 1992.

The Department is pursuing alternative accelerated cleanup and risk-reduction strategies that will significantly reduce life-cycle cost and schedules for cleanup of the former nuclear weapons production complex. When the Department reaches agreement with regulatory officials on these strategies, establishes a new funding profile and estimates the cost savings for the alternate cleanup strategy, these activities will be funded within the appropriate Defense or Non-Defense Site Acceleration Completion appropriation.

Intelligence.—The Department's intelligence activities consist of providing the Department, other U.S. Government policy makers, and the Intelligence Community with timely, accurate high impact foreign intelligence technical analyses including support to counterintelligence; ensuring that DOE facilities and employees are able to handle and use classified intelligence information securely in support of their missions; providing quick-turnaround, tailored technology applications to meet near-term requirements; providing technical support to operations undertaken by the intelligence, special operations, and law enforcement communities; and ensuring that the Department's technical, analytical and research expertise is accessible to the Intelligence Community in accordance with Executive Order 12333, "United States Intelligence Activities."

Counterintelligence.—The Office of Counterintelligence mission is to develop and implement an effective Counterintelligence Program throughout the Department of Energy to identify, neutralize and deter foreign government or industrial intelligence, and international terrorist activities at or involving DOE programs, personnel, facilities, technologies, classified information and unclassified sensitive information. The program provides the analytical; investigative; training and awareness; inspection; information and special technologies; polygraph; and evaluation capabilities necessary to identify and address foreign intelligence and international terrorist targeting and collection activities directed at DOE facilities.

Security.—Security consists of the following programs: Nuclear Safeguards and Security, Security Investigations and Program Direction. Key mission areas are: physical, information, technology evaluation; materials control and accountability; executive protection police force; protective measures for DOE facilities and protection of its employees in the National Capital area; declassification/classification; foreign visits, assignments and travel; plutonium, uranium, and special nuclear material inventory; management of the Department's Emergency Operations Centers, Emergency Communications Network and the Continuity of Operations and Continuity of Government programs; and security investigations. These programs provide policy for the protection of the Department's nuclear weapons, nuclear materials, classified information, and facilities. They ensure a Department-wide capability to continue essential functions across a wide range of potential emergencies, allowing DOE to uphold its national security responsibilities and provide security clearances for federal and contractor personnel. Prior to 2003, Security was budgeted under Security and Emergency Operations.

Energy Security and Assurance.—This program supports the national security of the United States by working to protect the Nation against significant energy supply disruptions. America's energy supply is essential to a strong economy and national security.

Worker and community transition.—This program provides for the development, implementation, and funding of plans under section 3161 of the National Defense Authorization Act of 1993, to provide options to assist workers affected by workforce restructuring including preference in hiring, outplacement assistance, and relocation assistance. This program also provides impact assistance to local communities, as well as disposition of assets excess to current Department needs.

Environment, safety and health (Defense).—The Office of Environment, Safety and Health is a corporate resource that provides Departmental leadership and management to protect the workers, public, and environment. The programs in the other defense activities are oversight, health studies, radiation effects research foundation, and employee compensation support as well as program direction.

Independent oversight and performance assurance.—This program provides an independent assessment of the effectiveness of Departmental policies and site performance in the areas of environment, safety, health safeguards, security, emergency management, cyber security, and other critical functions. Appraisals are performed to determine whether site programs are effectively implemented and achieving Department-wide and site specific objectives.

All other.—This category includes obligations for a portion of the projects reviewed under the Independent Assessment of DOE project funding. In addition, obligations are included for the National Security Programs Administrative Support and the Office of Hearings and Appeals. Responsibilities of the Office of Hearings and Appeals include adjudications of matters involving DOE and contractor employees' eligibility for security clearances, appeals of adverse determinations under the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts. The Office of Hearings and Appeals adjudicates complaints of reprisals by contractor-employees for "whistleblowing", and is the appeal authority in many other areas. During 2002, the Office of Hearings and Appeals was charged with the responsibility to decide worker advocacy appeals under the Energy Employee Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act of 2000 and appeals arising under the new terms of OMB Circular A-76 regarding the contracting out of DOE functions.

The Office also decides all requests for exception from DOE orders, rules and regulations.

Office of Legacy Management.—Provides funding for conducting stewardship activities at sites where active remediation as a result of weapons production has been completed. These activities include records management, ground-water monitoring and the administration of post closure contractor liabilities.

This appropriation was established by Congress as part of the 1993 Energy and Water Development Appropriation (P.L. 102-377) in lieu of payment from the Department of Energy into the Nuclear Waste Fund for activities related to the disposal of defense high-level waste.

The program's cost estimates reflect DOE's best projections, given the scope of work identified and planned schedule of required activities. Future budget requests for the Program have yet to be established and will be determined through the annual executive and congressional budget process.

Since passage of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, as amended, the Nuclear Waste Fund has incurred costs for activities related to disposal of high-level waste generated from the atomic energy defense activities of the Department of Energy. At the end of 2002 the balance owed by the Federal Government to the Nuclear Waste Fund was approximately $1,223 million (including principal and interest). The "Defense Nuclear Waste Disposal" appropriation was established to ensure payment of the Federal Government's contribution to the nuclear waste repository program. Through 2002, a total of approximately $1,710 million has been appropriated to support nuclear waste repository activities attributed to atomic energy defense activities.

High energy physics.—This research program focuses on gaining insights into the fundamental constituents of matter, the fundamental forces in nature, and the transformations between matter and energy at the most elementary level. The program encompasses both experimental and theoretical particle physics research and related advanced accelerator and detector technology R&D. The primary mode of experimental research involves the study of collisions of energetic particles using large particle accelerators or colliding beam facilities.

Research in 2004 will continue to focus on studies of known fundamental particle constituents, the search for new particle constituents, and the pursuit of a unified description of the four fundamental forces in nature.

In addition to contributing to breakthrough discoveries such as the existence of the top quark, high energy physics research enhances national economic competitiveness. State-of-the-art technology developed for accelerators and detectors contribute to progress in fields such as fast electronics, high-speed computing, superconducting magnet technology, and high-power radio frequency devices. High energy physics research also continues to make major contributions to accelerator technology and provides the expertise necessary for the expansion of such technology into fields such as medical diagnostics, and applied research using synchrotron light sources.

The 2004 high energy physics budget request will support the continued operation of two of the Department's major high energy physics facilities: the Fermilab Tevatron and the Stanford B-Factory. Fixed target operations for the Alternate Gradient Synchrotron HEP program were terminated in FY 2003. In addition, $48.8 million is provided for the Department's 2004 contribution to continued U.S. participation in the large hadron collider project at the European Center for Nuclear Research.

The high energy physics R&D request provides funding for advanced accelerator and detector R&D that is necessary for next-generation high energy particle accelerators. The request also includes $12.5 million for the neutrinos at the main injector construction project. The budget includes funds for an increasing emphasis on non-accelerator-based high energy physics research.

Nuclear Physics.—The goal of the nuclear physics program is to understand the interactions and structure of atomic nuclei and to investigate fundamental particles and forces of nature as manifested in nuclear matter. In 2004, the program will continue to focus on the role of quarks in the composition and interactions of nuclei, the application of nuclear physics methods to astrophysical problems, the properties of neutrinos, and the mechanisms by which colliding nuclei exchange mass, energy, and angular momentum.

The nuclear physics program supports and provides experimental equipment to qualified scientists and research groups conducting experiments at nuclear physics accelerator facilities. These facilities provide new insights and advance our knowledge of the nature of matter and energy and develop the scientific knowledge, technologies and trained manpower needed to underpin the DOE's missions for nuclear related national security, energy and environmental quality.

The Thomas Jefferson National Accelerator Facility/Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility experimental program began in 1996 and will continue in 2004. At the MIT/Bates accelerator a program of research utilizing the BLAST large acceptance detector will continue. Experimental operations at the Radioactive Ion Beam facility in Oak Ridge National Laboratory will continue in 2004. Operation of ATLAS (ANL) will be supported, as will the operation of the university-based accelerator laboratories. The 88-inch cyclotron (LBNL) will be terminated.

The Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC) research program will continue as RHIC and its four major detectors approach their full design potential, allowing researchers to explore a new regime of nuclear matter and nuclear interactions that up to now have only been characterized theoretically. Research and development for a possible future facility, the rare isotope accelerator, continues. The budget includes funds for an increasing emphasis on non-accelerator-based nuclear physics research.

Biological and environmental research.—This program develops the knowledge base necessary to identify, understand, and anticipate the long-term health and environmental consequences of energy use and development and utilizes the Department's unique scientific and technological capabilities to solve major scientific problems in the environment, medicine, and biology. Planned 2004 activities include programs in global climate change; terrestrial, atmospheric and marine environmental processes; molecular, cellular and systemic studies on the biological effects of radiation; structural biology; medical applications of nuclear technology; and the Human Genome Program. Funding for the Human Genome Program is provided to continue high throughput human DNA sequencing. The program also supports science related to carbon sequestration and sequencing of genomes of microbes that use carbon dioxide to produce methane and hydrogen. In conjunction with the advanced scientific computing research program a global systems application is continued to accelerate progress in coupled general circulation model development through use of enhanced computer simulation and modeling.

The “genomes to life” activity, aimed at understanding the composition and function of biochemical networks that carry out essential processes of living organisms is funded at $59.0 million. In 2003, the Environmental Management Science Program and the Savannah River Ecology Laboratory were transferred from the Office of Environmental Management to the Office of Science. The biological and environmental research request includes funding to continue these two activities in 2004. Activities related to bioterrorism will be transferred in 2003 to the Department of Homeland Security.

Basic Energy Sciences.—The basic energy sciences (BES) program funds basic research in the physical, biological and engineering sciences that support the Department’s nuclear and non-nuclear technology programs. The BES program is responsible for operating large national user research facilities, including synchrotron light and neutron sources, a combustion research facility, as well as smaller user facilities such as materials preparation and electron microscopy centers.

The BES program supports a substantial basic research budget for materials sciences, chemical sciences, energy biosciences, engineering and geosciences. The program supports a number of research areas that are unique within the Federal government; in many basic research areas, such as materials science, funding provided by the BES program represents a large percentage, or even the sole source, of Federal funding.

The 2004 BES budget request includes continued support to maintain utilization of the Department’s large state-of-the-art science facilities. The proposed funding will maintain the quality of service and availability of facility resources to users, including university and government scientists, as well as private companies who rely on unique BES facilities for their basic research needs. Research areas that will benefit from the facilities funding include structural biology, materials science, superconductor technology, and medical research and technology development.

In addition, the BES request includes $143.0 million in 2004 to continue construction at Oak Ridge National Laboratory for the Spallation Neutron Source (SNS) to meet the Nation’s neutron scattering needs. The request includes $5 million to continue design and fabrication of additional instruments beyond the initial instrument suite included in the construction project. The SNS will provide significant scientific, technical, and economic benefits that derive from neutron scattering and materials irradiation research. This world class Neutron source will enable the Nation to carry out major research activities in areas such as biology, materials science, superconductivity, pharmaceuticals, and electronic materials, that are critical for future U.S. economic competitiveness and national security. Reflecting the high priority given to nanoscale research, basic energy sciences funding for the multi-agency national nanotechnology program is $193.0 million and includes PED funding for the nanoscale science research center (NSRC) at Brookhaven National Laboratory and construction funding for NSRC’s at the Lawrence Berkeley, Oak Ridge, and Sandia National Laboratories. Equipment is funded for the NSRC at ANL, where the state of Illinois is providing funding for the building.

Fusion Energy Sciences Program.—The fusion energy sciences program for 2004 continues to implement the recommendations of the reports by the National Research Council, the Secretary of Energy Advisory Board and recommendations of the Fusion Energy Science Advisory committee. The mission of the program is to advance plasma science, fusion science, and fusion technology. The program emphasizes the underlying basic research in plasma and fusion sciences, with the long-term goal of harnessing fusion as a viable energy source. The program centers on the following goals: understanding the physics of plasmas; identification and exploration of innovative and cost effective development paths to fusion energy; and exploration of the science and technology of energy producing plasmas, as a partner in an international effort.

The budget includes funds for the Department to enter multilateral international negotiations aimed at building the International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor (ITER), a burning plasma physics experiment that is an essential next step toward eventually developing fusion as a commercially viable energy source.

The budget request provides for support of basic research in plasma science in partnership with NSF, plasma containment research, and investigation of tokamak alternatives, along with continued operation of DIII-D, Alcator C-Mod, and the National Spherical Torus Experiment. Research on alternate concepts is continued to develop a fuller understanding of the physics of magnetically confined plasma and to identify approaches that may improve the economical and environmental attractiveness of fusion. Fabrication of the new National Compact Stellarator experiment will continue at Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory. The inertial fusion energy activity is exploring an alternative path for fusion energy that would capitalize on the major R&D effort in inertial confinement fusion which is carried out by NNSA for stockpile stewardship purposes. Theory and modeling efforts will be supported to develop a predictive capability for the operation of fusion experiments. Enabling technology research will also be conducted in support of the science experiments.

Science laboratories infrastructure.—The goal of the science laboratories infrastructure program is to provide funds for rehabilitating, replacing or demolishing deficient common-use utilities, roads, and buildings and to correct Environment, Safety and Health deficiencies at the civilian science laboratories. An “excess facilities disposal” subprogram, first funded by Congress in 2002 as the Facilities and Infrastructure program, continues in 2004 in the Science Laboratories Infrastructure program. The Oak Ridge Landlord activity is also funded here.

Advanced Scientific Computing Research (ASCR).—This program includes research in mathematical, information, and computational sciences and laboratory technology research activities. The purpose of the ASCR program is to support advanced computational research—applied mathematics, computer science, and networking—to enable the analysis, simulation and prediction of complex physical phenomena. The program also supports the operation of large supercomputer user facilities. The request includes research, integrated with other science programs, on application of computer simulation and modeling to science problems. The budget includes research funds to identify and address major architectural bottlenecks affecting the performance of existing and planned scientific applications for the next generation of high-end supercomputers.

Safeguards and security.—The mission of this program is to ensure appropriate levels of protection and provide against: unauthorized access, theft, diversion, loss of custody, or destruction of Department of Energy assets and hostile acts that may cause adverse impacts on fundamental science, or the health and safety of DOE and contractor employees, the public, or the environment. The 2004 request provides funding for physical protection, protective forces, physical security, protective systems, information security, cyber security, personnel security, materials control and accountability and program management activities.

Workforce development for teachers and scientists.—The mission of this program is to train young scientists, engineers, and technicians in the scientifically and technically advanced environment of the Office of Science national laboratories to meet the demand for a well trained scientific and technical workforce, including the teachers that educate the workforce.

The purpose of Energy Supply Research and Development activities is to develop new energy technologies and improve existing energy technologies. Included in this mission are basic and applied research and targeted programs in technology development.

This account provides funds for both operating expenses and capital equipment for the advancement of the various energy technologies under examination in the energy supply, research and development mission.

The 2004 Budget proposes a major new initiative to accelerate the worldwide availability and affordability of hydrogen-powered fuel cell vehicles. The new FreedomFuel initiative will be a partnership with energy companies focused on research and development to advance hydrogen production, storage, and infrastructure. It complements the FreedomCAR partnership with the auto industry announced last year, which is aimed at developing viable hydrogen fuel cell vehicle technology.

Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy.—This program undertakes research and development of renewable energy and related technologies to meet the growing need for clean and affordable energy. Program activities range from basic research in universities and national laboratories to cost-shared applied research, development, and field validation in partnership with the private sector. Specific activities of the 2004 program include:

Hydrogen Technology: Develop hydrogen production, storage, and delivery technologies that are more energy efficient, cleaner, safer, and lower in cost. The long-term aim is to accelerate progress toward an energy future for the Nation where hydrogen plays a more significant role as an energy carrier in all sectors of the economy and all regions of the country. The program supports the new FreedomFuel initiative.

Solar Energy: Develop lower cost, higher performance, more reliable solar energy systems for the production of electricity, space heat and hot water. Activities include more efficient photovoltaic (PV) materials and cell devices, lower-cost thin-film PV technologies, improved manufacturing and large-area processing, and more reliable PV modules and systems as part of an industry-led research effort. Solar thermal activities are focused on cooperative industry efforts to reduce costs and effectively use advanced solar technology for water heating and space heat.

Zero Energy Buildings: Develop affordable zero energy homes, which produce as much energy as they use on an annual basis. ZEB activities include partnering with industry to evaluate and monitor first generation ZEB homes, developing whole house energy controller, and developing modeling tools and technology to optimize and integrate energy systems. This year, ZEB activities begin a transition into the Building Program under the Energy Conservation account.

Wind Energy: Develop in partnership with industry low wind-speed technology to allow wind power to be cost-competitive in more prevalent, lower-wind resources areas, and support related technology base advances.

Hydropower: Continue development of turbine systems to address the primary environmental issues associated with licensing and sustaining hydropower production.

Geothermal Technology: Continue development of an enhanced geothermal system that will allow the broader use of geothermal energy throughout the western United States and conduct cooperative research with industry to reduce the cost of geothermal development and to identify new resources.

Biomass and Biorefinery Systems: Continue R&D to achieve further reductions in the costs of bio-based products and biofuels production and to develop high-efficiency thermochemical and biochemical conversion technologies.

Intergovernmental Activities: The Tribal Energy program helps Native Americans develop renewable energy resources on their lands and helps Tribal leaders develop energy plans. The International Renewable Energy program promotes the use of renewable energy resources in international markets.

Electric Reliability: The program provides a balanced research and development portfolio of advanced electrical infrastructure technologies—more efficient, higher capacity generators, transformers, power lines, and storage systems—as well as developing the technological platform for the “smart” grid of the future where operators have immediate information about conditions on their system and are able to take action to correct potential problems.

The Departmental Energy Management Program: Continue to fund, through internal competition, the most cost effective opportunities to improve energy efficiency in DOE’s facilities, employing renewable technologies as appropriate.

National Climate Change Technology Initiative Competitive Solicitation Program: Supports competitive solicitations to promote applied research that has as its primary goal the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions or the sequestration of greenhouse gases. Competitive awards will be made based on maximum emissions reduction potential per dollar spent. The Competitive Solicitation Program is a key component of the President’s National Climate Change Technology Initiative and is intended to complement and enrich the existing research and development portfolio of climate-related technologies, which may help to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, but are not necessarily designed to do so. Funding for this program is also requested in the Energy Conservation account and the Fossil Energy account.

Nuclear fission.—The 2004 Budget continues to support the Nuclear Energy Technologies program, including the Nuclear Power 2010 program, which will aggressively pursue demonstration of key regulatory approval processes and foster the completion of cost-effective, advanced nuclear plant designs in order to pave the way for the deployment of new, advanced nuclear plants in the United States by 2010. Nuclear Energy Technologies also include the Generation IV Nuclear Energy Systems Initiative, where the United States will participate in multi-nation research and development projects to usher forth next-generation nuclear reactors and fuel cycles. In collaboration with the Generation IV Nuclear Energy Systems program, Advanced Fuel Cycle Initiative aims to develop and deploy technologies that will reduce the volume of high level waste from spent nuclear fuel, reduce the long-term radiotoxicity of spent nuclear fuel, reduce the long-term proliferation threat posed by civilian inventories of plutonium in spent fuel, and provide for proliferation resistant technologies to recover the energy content in spent nuclear fuel.

The Department also continues to support the University program, preserving the education and training infrastructure needed to develop the next generation of nuclear scientists and engineers. In addition, the Administration’s proposal supports the Nuclear Energy Research Initiative (NERI), an investigator-initiated, peer-reviewed research and development program that addresses key issues affecting the future of nuclear energy, including nuclear waste storage and disposal, nuclear plant economics and operational safety, and potential for weapons proliferation.

Nuclear fission programs also support the Department’s critical infrastructure necessary to enable research on advanced nuclear power systems for U.S. national security and other federal agencies, to support the production of radioisotopes for medical and other research purposes, and to maintain and operate the Department’s nuclear facilities, including the Advanced Test Reactor and hot cells, in a safe, environmentally compliant and cost-effective manner. Beginning in 2004, the Office of Nuclear Energy, Science and Technology’s budget also includes funding for Idaho sitewide operations and safeguards and security programs, as part of the Lead Program Secretarial Office responsibilities for Idaho transitioning from the Office of Environmental Management.

Environment, safety and health.—The Office of Environment, Safety and Health is a corporate resource that fosters protection of workers, the public, and the environment. The office develops and improves policies; monitors environment, safety, and health performance; and provides guidance, resources, and information sharing.

Note that the budget request for the Office of Environment, Safety and Health programs is contained in two accounts: Energy Supply and Other Defense Activities. The funding in this account supports policy, standards and guidance and DOE-wide ES&H programs as well as program direction.

The Fossil Energy Research and Development program supports high-priority, high-risk research that will improve the Nation's ability to use coal cleanly and efficiently. The program funds research and development that strengthens the technology base industry uses in developing new products and processes to support these national goals. Fossil Energy R&D supports activities ranging from early concept research in universities and national laboratories to applied R&D and proof-of-concept projects in private-sector firms.

President's Coal Research Initiative.—The budget assumes that, following the merger with the Clean Coal Technology account in 2003, all DOE coal research activities are now carried out in the Fossil Energy R&D account as part of the Clean Coal Power initiative. Should funds be de-obligated from any pre-existing projects, these funds can be made available for new projects under this initiative. The Department will continue to increase involvement of the private sector and academia to help conduct and direct research toward the most critical barriers to expansion of coal use for power generation in the United States. This cooperative effort will require industry to share in the cost of research work, with the industry share increasing as technologies approach commercial stages. Technologies will be selected with the goal of accelerating development and deployment of coal technologies that will economically meet environmental standards, while increasing the efficiency and reliability of coal power plants. The coal R&D program will focus on addressing the energy and environmental demands of the post-2000 domestic market, and includes three elements: (1) Central systems, which includes the technologies for advanced coal-fueled power systems, and innovations for existing plants; (2) Sequestration R&D, which focuses on greenhouse gas capture and reduction; and (3) Advanced research, which, through early concept research, bridges fundamental research and engineering development. The program goals of these elements are integrated through the Vision 21 concept, aimed at doubling the existing power plant efficiency with the flexibility to produce high-value products from coal and other fuels while achieving near-zero pollution and reducing energy costs.

As part of the program's Carbon Sequestration efforts, Fossil Energy will contribute funding to a joint effort with the Office of Nuclear Energy and the Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy called the National Climate Change Technology Initiative Competitive Solicitation Program. These funds will support competitive solicitations to promote applied research that has as its primary goal the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions or the sequestration of greenhouse gases. Competitive awards will be made based on maximum emissions reduction potential. The competitive solicitation program is a key component of the president's national climate change technology initiative and is intended to complement and enrich the existing research and development portfolio of climate change related technologies. The technologies in the existing portfolio may help reduce greenhouse gas emissions, but have been selected for the portfolio with a variety of goals in mind, not necessarily greenhouse gas reductions. This program is intended to have technologies compete head to head, based on their ability to reduce greenhouse gas in the atmosphere.

Other Power Systems.—Other Power Systems focuses on novel power generation systems, distributed power generation systems including fuel cell technology, and supporting technology for all power systems.

Oil and Gas.—The Oil and Gas programs will focus on supporting the President's initiatives on Clear Skies, Climate Change, and Energy Security. Activities include technology and analytical investments that support the Administration's objectives to increase domestic production, protect the environment, and build global alliances.

Program direction and management support.—The program provides the funding for all headquarters and indirect field personnel and overhead expenses in Fossil Energy. In addition, it provides support for day-to-day project management functions.

Environmental restoration.—The Department of Energy is managing the environmental cleanup of former and present Fossil Energy project sites. Activities include environmental protection, onsite cleanup, and cleanup at several former off-site research and development locations in Wyoming and Connecticut and environmental efforts at the National Energy Technology Laboratory Morgantown and Pittsburgh sites, and the Albany Research Center.

Import/Export Authorization.—This program will continue regulatory reviews and oversight of the transmission of natural gas and electricity across the U.S. borders.

The Naval Petroleum and Oil Shale Reserves has historically managed, operated, maintained and produced the reserves to achieve the greatest value and benefit to the Government. From FY 1976 through FY 2000, NPOSR production activities generated a net income of $21 billion for the U.S. Treasury. As a result of the National Defense Authorization Act for FY 1996, NPR-1 (Elk Hills) was sold to Occidental Petroleum Corporation and all three naval oil shale reserves (NOSR) have been transferred outside the Department. Administrative jurisdiction for NOSR-1 and NOSR-3 were transferred to the Department of the Interior to be made available for leasing. The third oil shale reserve, NOSR-2, was transferred to the Ute Indian Tribe in January 2000 in accordance with the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001. The U.S. retains a 9% royalty interest in the value of any oil, gas, other hydrocarbons, and other minerals produced from the conveyed land, which will be applied to costs for remediation of the uranium mill tailings site near Moab, Utah. The most significant post-sale activity is the settlement of ownership equity shares with the former unit partner in the NPR-1 field, Chevron USA Inc. Geologic petroleum and reservoir engineering services are required to prepare and support the Government's equity position before an independent petroleum engineer and the Assistant Secretary for Fossil Energy, who is to impartially determine final equity shares. Each percentage point change in equity is worth millions of dollars to the Government. The FY2004 budget request supports activities for the two remaining Naval Petroleum Reserve properties—Naval Petroleum Reserve Number 2 in California, and Naval Petroleum Reserve Number 3 in Wyoming. The Elk Hills closeout work includes reservoir engineering analysis to determine final equity percentages; legal support for all sale-related issues; and environmental remediation and cultural resource activities required as a result of the sale agreement. Responsibilities for the other properties include management and environmental compliance of the 17 NPR-2 leases; operation and maintenance of NPR-3 field operations; and environmental remediation of NPR-3. No funding is provided in FY2004 for the Rocky Mountain Oilfield Testing Center.

The Administration's energy efficiency programs have the potential to produce substantial benefits for the Nation—both now and in the future—in terms of economic growth, increased energy security and a cleaner environment through the research and development of energy efficiency and pollution prevention technologies. These programs carry out the Department's responsibility under the Energy Policy Act of 1992 and other authorizing legislation.

The 2004 Budget proposes a major new initiative to accelerate the worldwide availability and affordability of hydrogen-powered fuel cell vehicles. The new FreedomFuel initiative will be a partnership with energy companies focused on research to advance hydrogen production, storage, and infrastructure. It complements the FreedomCAR partnership with the auto industry announced last year, which is aimed at developing viable hydrogen fuel cell vehicle technology.

Vehicle Technologies.—This program supports the FreedomCAR and 21st Century Truck partnerships with industry. Program activities encompass a suite of technologies, including lightweight materials, electronic power control, high power storage, and hybrid electric drive motors. This program also supports research specifically aimed at improving the efficiency of energy conversion in advanced combustion engines and use of cleaner, more available alternative fuels.

Fuel Cell Technologies.—This program supports the FreedomFuel and FreedomCAR partnerships and stationary fuel cell applications. The program develops fuel cell technologies that are more energy efficient, cleaner, safer, reliable, durable and lower in cost. The long-term aim is to accelerate progress toward an energy future for the Nation where hydrogen fuel cells play a significant role as an energy carrier in all sectors of the economy and all regions of the country.

Weatherization and Intergovernmental.—The Weatherization and Intergovernmental program funds activities that facilitate the movement of energy efficient and renewable energy products into the marketplace.

Conservation grant programs.—The Weatherization Assistance Program improves the energy efficiency of low-income homes by providing technical assistance and formula grants to State and local weatherization agencies. The State Energy Program provides financial assistance to States through formula grants, enabling states to individually tailor energy efficiency projects to local needs.

Gateway Deployment.—is an integrated activity designed to provide technical and financial assistance to States and communities through activities such as Rebuild America, Energy Efficiency Information and Outreach, Building Codes Training and Assistance, Clean Cities, Energy Star, and Inventions and Innovations.

Distributed Energy Resources.—This program funds research and development to transform the current, electrical generation sector to a smarter, more flexible and more efficient energy system through the development and integration of distributed generation and combined heat and power technologies.

Building Technologies.—In partnership with the buildings industry, the program develops, promotes, and integrates energy technologies and practices to make buildings more efficient and affordable and communities more livable. The Building Technologies program accelerates the availability of highly efficient buildings technologies and practices through research and development; increases the minimum efficiency of buildings and equipment through building codes, appliance standards, and guidelines; and encourages the use of energy-efficient and renewable energy technologies and practices in residential and commercial buildings.

Industrial Technologies.—The program focuses on funding cost-shared research in critical technology areas identified by industry. The Industries of the Future (Specific) program encourages the most energy-intensive industries to develop a strategic vision and a "technology roadmap" to help achieve that vision. The Industries of the Future (Crosscutting) program develops technologies that are useful to multiple industries simultaneously, such as sensors and controls and advanced industrial materials, which address a multitude of wear and corrosion problems.

Biomass and Biorefinery Systems R&D.—This program was formed by combining several activities under a single structure to achieve cost savings by focusing on a limited and coherent set of goals and objectives while exploiting synergies. The program includes the Agricultural Industries of the Future program, part of the Energy Performance Sensors and Controls activity, and biopower/biofuels activities funded under the Energy Supply account. The program focuses on reducing processing energy requirements and production costs in biomass processing plants and future integrated industrial biorefineries.

Federal Energy Management Program.—This program reduces the cost and environmental impact of the Federal government by advancing energy efficiency and water conservation, promoting the use of renewable energy, and managing utility costs in Federal facilities and operations.

National Climate Change Technology Initiative Competitive Solicitation Program.—Supports competitive solicitations to promote applied research that has as its primary goal the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions or the sequestration of greenhouse gases. Competitive awards will be made based on maximum emissions reduction potential per dollar spent. The Competitive Solicitation Program is a key component of the President's National Climate Change Technology Initiative and is intended to complement and enrich the existing research and development portfolio of climate change-related technologies, which may help to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, but are not necessarily designed to do so. Funding for this program is also requested in the Fossil Energy account and Energy Supply account.

The object of this program is to reduce the vulnerability of the United States to energy supply disruptions by maintaining a crude oil stockpile capable of rapid deployment at the direction of the President. This program enables the President to meet the Nation's membership commitments within the International Energy Agency's coordinated energy emergency response plans and programs to deter the use of energy supply disruptions and to take effective, co-ordinated action should such an energy supply disruption occur.

The account provides for ongoing storage site operations and maintenance activities, planning activities, drawdown testing/readiness of the Reserve, planning studies, and program administration. Continuous removal of excess gas from the SPR crude oil inventory will commence in 2004.

The key measure of program performance is expressed as capability to comply with Level 1 Technical and Performance Criteria. These criteria are specific engineered performance and reliability standards applied to critical inventory storage, drawdown, and distribution systems required for drawing down and distributing crude oil inventory.

This account provides for the acquisition, transportation, and injection of petroleum into the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. This account funds all Strategic Petroleum Reserve petroleum inventory acquisitions, associated transportation costs, U.S. Customs duties, terminal throughput charges, incremental drawdown costs, and other related miscellaneous costs. The Department of Energy was directed to add approximately 108 million barrels of oil to the SPR using royalty oil from federal offshore leases. Filling the SPR addresses the President's initiative to enhance the energy security of the United States by strengthening the nation's capability to respond to potential oil supply disruptions. The FY 2003 request included $11.0 million in the Petroleum Account for Royalty oil. Funding is not requested in the FY 2004 budget for Royalty Oil due to a contractual change making transportation charges for Royalty-In-Kind fill the responsibility of the contractors.

This program supports energy information activities designed to provide timely, accurate and relevant energy information for use by the Administration, the Congress, and the general public. The activities funded in this program include the design, development and maintenance of information systems on petroleum, natural gas, coal, nuclear, electricity, alternate fuel sources, and energy consumption. This includes collecting data and ensuring its accuracy; preparing forecasts of alternative energy futures; and preparing reports on energy sources, end-uses, prices, supply and demand, and associated environmental, economic, international, and financial matters. In addition, the National Energy Information Center disseminates statistical and analytical publications, reports, and data files in hard-copy and electronic formats, and responds to public inquiries. Finally, this activity provides survey and statistical design standards, documentation standards, and energy data public-use forms clearance and burden control services.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (Commission) regulates key interstate aspects of the electric power, natural gas, oil pipeline, and hydropower industries. The Commission chooses regulatory approaches that foster competitive markets whenever possible, assures access to reliable service at a reasonable price, and gives full and fair consideration to environmental and community impacts in assessing the public interest of energy projects. Regulated businesses pay fees and charges sufficient to recover the Government's full costs of operations.

Energy Infrastructure.—The Commission must promote a secure, high quality and environmentally responsible infrastructure through consistent policies to meet market and operational demands. The Commission determines just and reasonable rates for the interstate transportation of natural gas and oil on the pipelines subject to the Commission's jurisdiction and sets rates for the interstate transmission and wholesale sales of electric energy. It approves rates for all Federal power marketing administrations, but not for TVA. The Commission also certifies three special classes of power generators: cogeneration facilities, small power production facilities, and exempt wholesale generators. Furthermore, the Commission authorizes tariff provisions, as appropriate, to allow the gas and oil pipelines and public utilities to adjust their services to meet their customers' needs and the utilities' needs to meet competition in their markets. The Commission has and will continue to develop creative and flexible pricing policies and new incentive mechanisms to promote the development of the nation's electric and gas infrastructures and support the competitive marketplace.

The Commission will continue to ensure that environmental concerns involving energy projects are properly addressed and that the public interest is protected when new hydropower projects are licensed or relicensed and when new natural gas pipeline services are authorized. The Commission issues preliminary permits, exemptions, licenses and relicenses for non-federal hydroelectric projects, enforces their terms and conditions, and performs dam safety inspections. It regulates over 1,660 hydroelectric projects, which supply about 5 percent of the electric energy generated in the United States. The Commission investigates to determine the amount of headwater benefits derived from federally owned and FERC-licensed headwater improvements, collects this amount from licensees, and returns it to the U.S. Treasury. The Commission also issues certificates authorizing natural gas pipelines to construct and operate new facilities and to provide new services.

In FY 2002, the Commission held several conferences on the security and other emergency issues of liquefied natural gas shipments, river crossing facilities, and other infrastructure, and engaged in ongoing discussions with the Departments of Transportation and Energy regarding safety and security matters. The Commission also created an infrastructure policy group for the express purpose of identifying present infrastructure conditions, needs, investment and other barriers to expansion, and environmental and landowner concerns.

Competitive Energy Markets.—The Commission fosters nationwide competitive energy markets in addition to continuing to regulate transmission providers subject to its jurisdiction. Since enactment of the Energy Policy Act of 1992, the Commission has introduced a number of initiatives to foster wholesale competition in the generation sector of the electric utility industry. In 1996, the Commission issued Order Nos. 888 and 889, which require all jurisdictional public utilities to provide open access transmission service to all wholesale customers under standard terms and conditions. At the end of 1999, the Commission issued Order No. 2000, which called on utilities to voluntarily form regional transmission organizations (RTOs), with Commission approval, to facilitate the efficient exchange of electricity over large regions of the country.

Much was accomplished in establishing RTOs by the end of calendar year 2002. The Midwest Independent System Operator, Inc. (Midwest ISO) was approved by the Commission as an RTO in December 2001 and commenced operations in February 2002 in all or parts of several Midwestern states and one Canadian province. The Southwest Power Pool (SPP) has proposed to join the Midwest ISO. The Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Maryland Interconnection (PJM), which was granted RTO status in December 2002, is working with the Midwest ISO and SPP to create a joint and common market that will span from the Atlantic Ocean to the Rocky Mountains. Finally, the Commission (1) approved essential parts of SeTrans RTO, which would extend over eight Southeastern states; (2) gave preliminary approval to WestConnect RTO, which would operate in parts of the Desert Southwest states of Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah, and (3) approved key aspects of the RTO West proposal, which includes all, or part of, eight Pacific Northwest states.

In July 2002, the Commission proposed for public comment a new rule to adopt a standard design for electric power markets using the best practices from around the country and the world. The intent of the standard market design proposal is to build on existing RTO formation efforts and to allow regional variation in appropriate aspects of market design. Standardized business rules and practices will maximize market efficiency, ease market entry, and transactions costs.

Market Oversight.—The Commission must protect customers and market participants through vigilant and fair oversight of the transitioning energy markets. The Commission will strengthen the role of RTO market monitoring units and will count on them as the first line of defense against problems. The Commission will ensure procompetitive market structures by identifying and remedying problems, assessing market and infrastructure conditions against objective benchmarks, and periodically reviewing and revising market rules for sustained, long-term development of energy markets. To this end, the Commission will publish a Seasonal Market Assessment for the summer cooling season and again for the winter heating season. This will allow for correction of major potential problems in the markets before they become serious. The Commission will also issue an annual State of the Markets Report, to review overall market performance for both natural gas and electricity and highlight longer term issues. In addition, the Commission will continue to ensure that mergers and consolidations are consistent with pro-competitive goals. The Commission will detect abuses of market power quickly and use prohibitions and penalties as necessary to remove, prevent, and deter abuses. The Commission will conduct investigations as warranted and act on complaints, using litigation before administrative law judges as necessary.

Resource Management.—Efficient management of resources facilitates accomplishing the Commission's regulatory mission. Resource management includes human resources management and development, financial management, including budget formulation and execution, strategic and business planning, and procurement, information technology, and external communications.

The alternative fuels program was established in 1980 for the purpose of expediting the development and production of alternative fuels from coal.

Upon default of the borrower in 1985 under a Federal loan guarantee, the Department acquired ownership of the Great Plains plant by foreclosure. On October 31, 1988, the Department completed an asset purchase agreement of the Great Plains Gasification Plant by Dakota Gasification Company (DGC).

Negotiated settlement agreements dated February 16, 1994, resolved all past disputes as well as restructured the Gas Purchase Agreements pricing provisions. In a separate agreement with DOE, DGC agreed to pay DOE $25 million over the 7 year period of time DGC receives the demand payments from the pipeline companies.

Funds in this account are used to pay for expenses and responsibilities related to the Department's prior operation of the Great Plains Coal Gasification Project and the administration of the Asset Purchase Agreement which transferred the facility to the private sector. During FY 2002, the largest costs were for technical analysis to determine the reduction in net synthetic natural gas production at the Great Plains Synfuels Plant caused by the operation of an Anhydrous Ammonia Synthesis Plant within the larger gasification facility, and its effect on revenues. Remaining outstanding obligations are for carrying out contractual obligations to the termination of the contract in 2009. The Federal revenue sharing receipts are based on this review and analysis.

In FY 2002, the Department of Energy received $12.8 million in revenue sharing payments from Dakota Gasification Company. The $12.8 million was returned by the Department of Energy to the Treasury as Miscellaneous Receipts. Future revenue sharing payments to the Department are dependent upon natural gas prices.

Title XXXIV, Subtitle B of Public Law 104-106 required the Department to sell the government's interest in Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 1 (Elk Hills) pursuant to the terms of the Act. The sale occurred in February 1998, following a statutorily-required 31-day congressional review period.

Section 3415 of the Act required, among other things, that the Department make an offer of settlement based on the fair value of the State of California's longstanding claims to two parcels of land ("school lands") within the Reserve. Under the Act, nine percent of the net proceeds were reserved in contingent fund in the Treasury for payment to the State. In compliance with the Act and in order to remove any cloud over title which could diminish the sales value of the Reserve, the Department entered into a settlement agreement with the State on October 11, 1996. That agreement calls for payment to the State, subject to appropriations, of nine percent of the net proceeds of sale, payable over a seven-year period (without interest), commencing in 1999. Under the settlement agreement and provided that funds are appropriated, the first five installments are for $36 million each year, and the remaining balance is to be paid in two equal installments in years six and seven. The budget requests $36 million in 2004 for the sixth installment payment.

ARCTIC NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE, ALTERNATIVE ENERGY
(Legislative proposal, subject to PAYGO)

The budget includes a proposal to use the Federal share of bonus bids from opening a small portion of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas exploration to supplement the funding for renewable and related energy research. The budget assumes that 1.2 billion of the bonus bids that would come to the Federal Government in 2005 would be spent on alternative and renewable energy resources programs over a period of seven years.

On July 10, 2000, the President directed the Department of Energy to establish a 2-million barrel home heating oil reserve in the Northeast capable of assuring home heating oil supply for the Northeast states during times of very low inventories and significant threats to immediate further supply. Two million barrels provide Northeast consumers adequate supplies for approximately 10 days, the time required for ships to carry heating oil from the Gulf of Mexico to New York Harbor for distribution.

On March 6, 2001, Secretary Spencer Abraham announced the establishment of the reserve as a permanent part of America's energy readiness effort, separate from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The original storage contracts were re-competed in the Spring of 2002 and contracts were awarded in New York Harbor, New Haven, Connecticut and Rhode Island. The 2004 Budget provides $5 million to continue leasing commercial storage space and provides for administrative support from the Defense Energy Support Center (DESC).

Because of the long-term nature of the project, the need to ensure the territorial integrity, security, and isolation of the site, and in satisfaction of Nuclear Regulatory Commission licensing requirements, the Administration plans to submit a proposal to withdraw permanently from settlement, sale, location, or entry under some or all of the general land laws, certain lands comprising and contiguous to the Yucca Mountain geologic repository operations area.

Growing quantities of spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste have been accumulating at commercial nuclear reactor sites and storage facilities across the country for half a century. They come from nuclear plants generating commercial electric power, nuclear weapons production, the operation of naval reactors, and Federal research and development activities. At Congress's direction, DOE has investigated the suitability of a storage site at Yucca Mountain, Nevada, 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas, for over 20 years. Based on sound science and compelling national interests, the President signed House Joint Resolution 87 approving the site at Yucca Mountain, Nevada for development as a geologic repository for the Nation's nuclear waste. The budget provides sufficient funding for DOE to prepare a license application to meet its plan for receipt of nuclear waste at the repository beginning in 2010. The Administration also will seek additional funding to begin essential transportation-related activities and provide a long-term management and financing plan for the entire licensing and construction effort. The Administration is committed to ensuring the environmentally sound and safe disposal of the Nation's radioactive waste.

In 2002, actual interest earnings were $1,598 million, and they are estimated to decline to $731 million in 2003 and $794 million in 2004. The reason for the decline is that the decrease in market interest rates in 2002 significantly increased the market value of the zero-coupon bonds held by the fund, and the interest earnings on these bonds is calculated as the change in market value. In 2002 and 2003, interest earnings are projected based on the effective yield method, instead of estimating the change in market value. We use the effective yield approach, because interest rates are impossible to predict accurately and because it is a simple method of projecting what will happen in the future "on average." The effective yield method is consistent with a small increase in market value.

The Alaska Power Administration (APA) was created in 1967 by the Secretary of the Interior to assume the functions of the Bureau of Reclamation in Alaska—the operations, maintenance, transmission, and power marketing of the two Federal hydroelectric projects (Eklutna and Snettisham), and the investigation of future water and power development programs.

The Alaska Power Administration Asset Sale and Termination Act (Public Law 104-58), signed into law on November 28, 1995, authorizes and directs the sale of all Alaska Power Administration assets and the subsequent termination of APA. The Eklutna project was sold on October 2, 1997, for a cash payment of $5,953,000. The Snettisham project was sold on August 18, 1998, for $81,966,177.

All remaining Alaska activities of APA, including the Juneau headquarters office, were terminated on September 30, 1998. Unobligated transition and termination balances were used to complete remaining close-out activities and report preparation in Washington, D.C. in 1999.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, SOUTHEASTERN POWER ADMINISTRATION

For necessary expenses of operation and maintenance of power transmission facilities and of marketing electric power and energy, including transmission wheeling and ancillary services, pursuant to the provisions of section 5 of the Flood Control Act of 1944 (16 U.S.C. 825s), as applied to the southeastern power area, $5,100,000, to remain available until expended; in addition, $16,000,000 shall be credited to this account as customer advances, to remain available until expended for the sole purpose of making purchase power and wheeling expenditures.

Note.—A regular 2003 appropriation for this account had not been enacted at the time the budget was prepared; therefore, this account is operating under a continuing resolution (P.L. 107-229, as amended). The amounts included for 2003 in this budget reflect the Administration's 2003 policy proposals.

The Southeastern Power Administration (Southeastern) markets power generated at Corps of Engineers hydroelectric generating plants in an eleven-State area of the Southeast. Deliveries are made by means of contracting for use of transmission facilities owned by others. There are 23 projects now in operation.

Southeastern sells wholesale power primarily to publicly and cooperatively-owned electric distribution utilities. Southeastern does not own or operate any transmission facilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic electric rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers costs of operation and capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

Program direction.—Provision is made for negotiation and administration of transmission and power contracts, collection of revenues, development of wholesale power rates, the amortization of power investment, energy efficiency and competitiveness program, investigation and planning of proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatch of power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administration of contractual operation requirements, and determination of methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources.

Use of receipts for Corps O&M funding.—In FY 2004, the Administration proposes to fund U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' power related operation and maintenance costs in Southeastern's service area from Southeastern receipts derived from the sale of power. Proprietary receipts estimated for FY 2004 are decreased to reflect implementation of this proposal.

Purchase power and wheeling.—Between 2001 and 2004, the Southeastern Power Administration will phase-out Federal financing of purchase power and wheeling activities. Authority to spend power revenues to pay for purchase of power and wheeling activities will end after 2004. Industry restructuring and resulting competition now make it attractive for Southeastern's customers to shop for power and transmission services. Southeastern may continue to support customer bill crediting, net billing and other alternative financing arrangements for these activities.

Based on Administration policy, the Southeastern Power Administration will set rates consistent with current law to recover the full cost of the Civil Service Retirement System and post-retirement health benefits for its employees.

A continuing fund of $50,000, maintained from receipts from the sale and transmission of electric power in the southeastern area, is available to defray expenses necessary to ensure continuity of service (16 U.S.C. 825s-2). The fund was activated during fiscal year 2002 to finance power purchases associated with below normal hydropower generation due to drought.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, SOUTHWESTERN POWER ADMINISTRATION

For necessary expenses of operation and maintenance of power transmission facilities and of marketing electric power and energy, for construction and acquisition of transmission lines, substations and appurtenant facilities, and for administrative expenses, including official reception and representation expenses in an amount not to exceed $1,500 in carrying out the provisions of section 5 of the Flood Control Act of 1944 (16 U.S.C. 825s), as applied to the southwestern power area, $28,600,000, to remain available until expended; in addition, notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 3302, beginning in fiscal year 2004 and thereafter, such funds as are received by the Southwestern Power Administration from any State, municipality, corporation, association, firm, district, or individual as advance payment for work that is associated with Southwestern's transmission facilities, consistent with that authorized in section 5 of the Flood Control Act, shall be credited to this account and be available until expended.

The Southwestern Power Administration (Southwestern) operates in a six-State area as a marketing agent for hydroelectric power produced at Corps of Engineers dams. It also operates and maintains 1,380 miles of high voltage transmission line, 24 substations and switching stations, and 46 VHF radio and microwave stations. Southwestern sells its power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively owned electric distribution utilities. Its power sales contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

Southwestern is also responsible for scheduling and dispatching power, negotiating power sales contracts, and constructing facilities required to meet changing customer load requirements.

Program direction.—This activity provides for program costs related to the operation, maintenance, and support functions of the power system and includes salaries and benefits, travel, support services, rent, communications, and other related expenses.

Systems operation and maintenance.—Provision is made for engineering assessments of issues and alternatives that could adversely impact or optimize the operation of Southwestern's hydroelectric resources. Provision is also made for maintenance and replacements of transmission system facilities to ensure reliable service, negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenue, development of wholesale power rates and the depreciation of the power investment.

Purchase power and wheeling.—Between 2001 and 2004, the Southwestern Power Administration will phase-out Federal financing of purchase power and wheeling activities. Authority to spend power revenues to pay for purchase of power and wheeling activities will end after 2004. Industry restructuring and resulting competition now make it attractive for Southwestern's customers to shop for power and transmission services. Southwestern may continue to support customer bill crediting, net billing and other alternative financing arrangements for these activities.

Construction.—The construction program provides for transmission, substation, switching and control facility replacements to transmit power generated at Corps of Engineers' hydroelectric projects in the Southwest. This program is coordinated with the Corps of Engineers' construction program and addresses customer requirements.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Southwestern Power Administration to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In FY 2004 and thereafter, Southwestern proposes to continue acceptance of advance funding from non-Federal entities for work related to activities authorized under the Flood Control Act of 1944.

Use of receipts for Corps O&M funding.—In FY 2004, the Administration proposes to fund U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' power related operation and maintenance costs in Southwestern's service area from Southwestern receipts derived from the sale of power. Proprietary receipts estimated for FY 2004 are decreased to reflect implementation of this proposal.

Based on Administration policy the Southwestern Power Administration will set rates consistent with current law to recover the full cost of the civil service retirement system and post-retirement health benefits for its employees.

The Western Area Power Administration (Western) markets electric power in 15 western States from federally-owned power plants operated primarily by the Bureau of Reclamation, Corps of Engineers, and the International Boundary and Water Commission. Western operates and maintains almost 17,000 circuit-miles of high-voltage transmission line, more than 260 substations/switchyards, and associated power system control, communication and electrical facilities for 15 separate power projects. Western also constructs additions and modifications to existing facilities.

In keeping with statutory requirements, Western's long-term power contracts allow for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers costs of operation, other costs allocated to power, and the capital investment in power facilities, with interest.

Power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, cooperatives, irrigation districts, public utility districts, State and Federal Government agencies, and private utilities. Receipts are deposited in the Reclamation Fund, the Falcon and Amistad Operating and Maintenance Fund, the General Fund, the Colorado River Dam Fund and the Colorado River Basins Power Marketing Fund.

Systems operation and maintenance.—The systems operation and maintenance activity provides essential electrical and communication equipment replacements, and upgrades, capitalized moveable equipment, technical services, and supplies and materials necessary for safe reliable operation and cost-effective maintenance of the power systems.

Purchase power and wheeling.—Between 2001 and 2004, the Western Area Power Administration will phase-out Federal financing of purchase power and wheeling activities. Authority to spend power revenues to pay for purchase power and wheeling activities will end after fiscal year 2004. Industry restructuring and resulting competition now make it attractive for Western's customers to shop for power and transmission services. Western will continue to support customer bill crediting, net billing and other alternative financing arrangements for these activities.

System construction.—Western's construction and rehabilitation activity emphasizes replacement and upgrades of existing infrastructure to sustain reliable power delivery to its customers, to contain annual maintenance costs, and to improve overall operational efficiency. Western will continue to participate in joint construction projects to encourage more widespread transmission access.

Program direction.—This activity provides compensation and all related expenses for the workforce that operates and maintains Western's high-voltage interconnected transmission system (systems operation and maintenance program), and those that plan, design, and supervise the construction of replacements, upgrades and additions (system construction program) to the transmission facilities.

Utah mitigation and conservation.—This account is earmarked primarily for environmental mitigation expenditures covering fish and wildlife, and recreation resources impacted by the Central Utah Project and the Colorado River Storage Project in the State of Utah. The FY 2004 President's Budget proposes to transfer the authorities and future contributions for the Utah Reclamation Mitigation and Conservation Account from the Secretary of Energy, Western Area Power Administration to the Secretary of the Interior, Bureau of Reclamation. Western sells and transmits power from two projects in Utah and provides mitigation funding separately for these operations. Western does not transmit power from the Central Utah Project.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Western to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements.

Western will continue to spend directly out of the Colorado River Dam Fund for operations and maintenance activities associated with the Boulder Canyon Project. The Colorado River Dam Fund is a revolving fund operated by the Interior Department's Bureau of Reclamation. Authority for Western to obligate directly from the Colorado River Dam Fund comes from section 104(a) of the Hoover Power Plant Act of 1984.

Based on Administration policy, the Western Area Power Administration will set rates consistent with current law to recover the full cost of the Civil Service Retirement System and post-retirement health benefits for its employees.

In FY 2004, the Administration proposes that financing of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' operation and maintenance costs in Western's service area, allocated to the power function for repayment, may be funded from Western receipts derived from the sale of power and related services. Proprietary receipts estimated for FY 2004 are decreased to reflect the implementation of this proposal.

Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) is the Federal electric power marketing agency in the Pacific Northwest. BPA markets hydroelectric power from 21 multipurpose water resource projects of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and 10 projects of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, plus some energy from non-Federal generating projects in the region. These generating resources and BPA's transmission system, planned by the end of 2003 to consist of an estimated 15,000 circuit miles of high-voltage transmission lines and 285 substations, are operated as an integrated power system with operating and financial results combined and reported as the Federal Columbia River Power System (FCRPS). BPA is the largest power wholesaler in the Northwest and provides about forty-five percent of the region's electric energy supply and about three-fourths of the region's electric power transmission capacity.

BPA is responsible for meeting the net firm power requirements of its requesting customers through a variety of means, including energy conservation programs, acquisition of renewable and other resources, and power exchanges with utilities both in and outside the region.

BPA will finance its operations on the basis of the self-financing authority provided by Federal Columbia River Transmission System Act of 1974 (Transmission Act) (Public Law 93-454) and the borrowing authority provided by the Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act (Pacific Northwest Power Act) (Public Law 96-501) for energy conservation, renewable energy resources and capital fish facilities. Authority to borrow is available to the BPA on a permanent, indefinite basis. The amount of borrowing outstanding at any time cannot exceed $3.75 billion. The FY 2004 budget includes a proposal to increase BPA borrowing authority by $700 million to finance planned infrastructure investments.

Operating expenses: Transmission services business line.—Provides funding from revenues for electric transmission research and development and program support of the capital investment program described below for transmission services. Provides for operating an estimated 15,000 miles of line and 285 substations, and for maintaining the facilities and equipment of the Bonneville transmission system in 2004.

Power business line.—Provides for the planning, contractual acquisition and oversight of reliable, cost effective resources. These resources are needed to serve BPA's portion of the region's forecasted net electric load requirements. Also includes protection, mitigation and enhancement of fish and wildlife affected by hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River and its tributaries in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act. Provides for payment of the operation and maintenance (O&M) costs of the 31 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation hydro projects, and amortization on the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation capital investment in power generating facilities and irrigation assistance at Bureau facilities. Provides for the planning, contractual acquisition and oversight of reliable, cost effective conservation. Also provides for extending the benefits of low cost Federal power to the residential and small farm customers of investor-owned and publicly-owned utilities, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act and for activities of the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council required by the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Interest.—Provides for payments to the U.S. Treasury for interest on borrowings to finance BPA's transmission services, conservation, capital equipment, fish and wildlife, and associated projects capital programs under $3.75 billion borrowing authority provided by the Transmission Act as amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50. In implementing the new borrowing authority, Bonneville will encourage private-sector or other non-federal financing or joint financing of transmission line expansions and additions, develop a five-year investment plan with the participation of the regional Infrastructure Technical Review Committee or its successor in the region, use funds only for authorized purposes, include the proposed use of the funds in its annual budget submissions, and select projects based on cost effectiveness criteria for achieving the objective. This category also includes interest on Corps of Engineers, BPA and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation appropriated debt.

Capital Investments: Transmission services business line.—Provides for the planning, design and construction of transmission lines, substation and control system additions, replacements, and enhancements to the FCRPS transmission system for a reliable, efficient and cost-effective regional transmission system. Provides for planning, design, and construction work to repair or replace existing transmission lines, substations, control systems, and general facilities of the FCRPS transmission system.

Power business line.—Provides for direct funding of additions, improvements, and replacements at existing Federal hydroelectric projects in the Northwest. Also provides for capital investments to implement environmental activities, and protect, mitigate, and enhance fish and wildlife affected by hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River and its tributaries, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act. Also provides for the planning, contractual acquisition and oversight of reliable, cost effective conservation.

Capital equipment/Capitalized bond premium.—Provides for general purpose ADP equipment, office furniture and equipment, and software capital development in support of all BPA programs. Also provides for bond premiums incurred for refinancing of bonds.

Contingencies.—Although contingencies are not specifically funded, the need may arise to provide for purchase of power in low-water years; for repair and/or replacement of facilities affected by natural and man-made emergencies, including the resulting additional costs for contracting, construction, and operation and maintenance work; for unavoidable increased costs for the planned program due to necessary but unforeseen adjustments, including engineering and design changes, contractor and other claims and relocations, or for payment of a retrospective premium adjustment in excess nuclear property insurance.

Financing.—The Transmission Act provides for the use by BPA of all receipts, collections, and recoveries in cash from all sources, including the sale of bonds, to finance the annual budget programs of BPA. These receipts result primarily from the sale of power and wheeling services. The Transmission Act also provides for authority to borrow from the U.S. Treasury at rates comparable to borrowings at open market rates for similar issues. As amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50, it allows for $3.75 billion of borrowing to be outstanding at any time. The 2004 capital obligations are estimated to be $528.0 million. To the extent BPA capital borrowing authority is insufficient in 2004, BPA would use cash reserves generated by revenues from customers, if available, to finance some of these investments.

In 2002, BPA made payments to the Treasury of $1.056 billion and also expects to make payments of $788.0 million in 2003 and $716.0 million in 2004. The 2004 payment will be distributed as follows: interest on bonds and appropriations ($464.0 million), amortization ($221.0 million), and other ($31.0 million). BPA also received credits totaling $38 million applied against its Treasury payments in 2002 to reflect amounts diverted to fish mitigation efforts in the Columbia and Snake River systems.

Direct loans.—During 2004, no new direct loan obligations may be made.

Operating results.—Total revenues are forecast at approximately $4.1 billion in 2004.

It should be noted that BPA's revenue forecasts are based on several critical assumptions about both the supply of and demand for Federal energy. During the operating year, deviation from the conditions assumed in a rate case may result in a variation in actual revenues of several hundred million dollars from the forecast.

Consistent with Administration policy, BPA will continue to fully recover, from the sale of electric power and transmission, funds sufficient to cover the full cost of Civil Service Retirement System and Post-Retirement Health Benefits for their employees. The entire cost of BPA employees working under the Federal Employees Retirement System is already fully recovered in wholesale electric power and transmission rates.

(Legislative proposal, subject to PAYGO)

The FY 2004 budget request includes a proposal to increase Bonneville's current $3.75 billion borrowing authority by $700 million. The new borrowing authority will allow BPA to finance additional infrastructure investments. BPA plans to obligate these funds in FY 2005, $85,000,000; FY 2006, $430,000,000; and FY 2007, $185,000,000.

Western's operation and maintenance (O&M) and power marketing expenses for the Colorado River Storage Project, the Colorado River Basin Project, the Seedskaadee Project, the Dolores Project and the Fort Peck Project are financed from power revenues.

Program direction.—Western operates and maintains approximately 4,000 miles of transmission lines, substations, switchyards, communications and control equipment associated with this Fund. The personnel compensation and related expenses for all these activities are quantified under Program Direction. Wholesale power is provided to utilities over interconnected high-voltage transmission systems. In keeping with statutory requirements, long-term power contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of O&M and all capital invested in power, with interest.

Colorado River Storage Project.—Western markets power and operates and maintains the power transmission facilities of the Colorado River Storage Project. Western also purchases electricity and pays wheeling fees to meet firm and nonfirm commitments.

Colorado River Basin Project.—The Colorado River Basin Project includes Western's expenses associated with the Central Arizona Project and the United States entitlement from the Navajo coal-fired powerplant. Revenues in excess of operating expenses are transferred to the Lower Colorado River Basin Development Fund.

Fort Peck Project.—Revenue collected by Western is used to defray operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses associated with the power generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck Project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, to defray emergency expenses, and to ensure continuous operation. The Corps operates and maintains the power generating facilities, and Western operates and maintains the transmission system and performs power marketing functions.

The Secretary may not delegate the authority to grant such a waiver.

(b) At least 60 days before a contract award for which the Secretary intends to grant such a waiver, the Secretary shall submit to the Subcommittees on Energy and Water Development of the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report notifying the Subcommittees of the waiver and setting forth, in specificity, the substantive reasons why the Secretary believes the requirement for competition should be waived for this particular award.

The Vaccine improvement program was established pursuant to Public Law 99-660 and Public Law 100-203, and serves as a source of funds to pay claims for compensation for vaccine related injury or death. Payment of claims associated with vaccine related injury or death occurring before October 1, 1988 are financed from the General Fund and are reflected in this account. Given sufficient carry-over funds from prior years' appropriations to pay for the balance of the pre-1988 backlog of claims yet to be adjudicated, no appropriation is requested in 2004 to cover payment of pre-1988 claims. By statute, no new claims are accepted for this account. Payment of claims associated with vaccine related injury or death occurring after October 1, 1988 are reflected in the Vaccine improvement trust fund account.

Title VII, part C of the Public Health Service Act established a revolving fund from which health professions schools could borrow in order to provide loans to their students.

Public Law 89-751, the Allied Health Professions Personnel Training Act of 1966, amended the Public Health Service Act to authorize the Federal Government to pay the difference between the interest paid by students to the schools and the interest payable by the schools to the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) and the Treasury.

Title VI and subsequently title XVI of the Public Health Service Act established a loan and loan guarantee fund for medical facilities with a maximum amount allowable for the Government's liability. Direct loans were made available for public facilities and guaranteed loans for private, nonprofit facilities. Funds under this authority were established in the amount of $50 million for use in fulfilling guarantees in event of default, $30 million as a revolving fund for direct loans and an amount for interest subsidy payments on guaranteed loans. Unobligated balances will be used to pay defaults and interest subsidy payments.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS, INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE

Appropriations in this Act to the Indian Health Service shall be available for services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109 but at rates not to exceed the per diem rate equivalent to the maximum rate payable for senior-level positions under 5 U.S.C. 5376; hire of passenger motor vehicles and aircraft; purchase of medical equipment; purchase of reprints; purchase, renovation and erection of modular buildings and renovation of existing facilities; payments for telephone service in private residences in the field, when authorized under regulations approved by the Secretary; and for uniforms or allowances therefor as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901-5902; and for expenses of attendance at meetings which are concerned with the functions or activities for which the appropriation is made or which will contribute to improved conduct, supervision, or management of those functions or activities.

In accordance with the provisions of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, non-Indian patients may be extended health care at all tribally administered or Indian Health Service facilities, subject to charges, and the proceeds along with funds recovered under the Federal Medical Care Recovery Act (42 U.S.C. 2651-2653) shall be credited to the account of the facility providing the service and shall be available without fiscal year limitation. Notwithstanding any other law or regulation, funds transferred from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to the Indian Health Service shall be administered under Public Law 86-121 (the Indian Sanitation Facilities Act) and Public Law 93-638, as amended.

Funds appropriated to the Indian Health Service in this Act, except those used for administrative and program direction purposes, shall not be subject to limitations directed at curtailing Federal travel and transportation.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds previously or herein made available to a tribe or tribal organization through a contract, grant, or agreement authorized by title I or title III of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act of 1975 (25 U.S.C. 450), may be deobligated and reobligated to a self-determination contract under title I, or a self-governance agreement under title III of such Act and thereafter shall remain available to the tribe or tribal organization without fiscal year limitation.

None of the funds made available to the Indian Health Service in this Act shall be used to implement the final rule published in the Federal Register on September 16, 1987, by the Department of Health and Human Services, relating to the eligibility for the health care services of the Indian Health Service until the Indian Health Service has submitted a budget request reflecting the increased costs associated with the proposed final rule, and such request has been included in an appropriations Act and enacted into law.

With respect to functions transferred by the Indian Health Service to tribes or tribal organizations, the Indian Health Service is authorized to provide goods and services to those entities, on a reimbursable basis, including payment in advance with subsequent adjustment. The reimbursements received therefrom, along with the funds received from those entities pursuant to the Indian Self-Determination Act, may be credited to the same or subsequent appropriation account which provided the funding. Such amounts shall remain available until expended.

Reimbursements for training, technical assistance, or services provided by the Indian Health Service will contain total costs, including direct, administrative, and overhead associated with the provision of goods, services, or technical assistance.

The appropriation structure for the Indian Health Service may not be altered without advance notice submitted to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) supports a number of categorical programs designed to improve the health, safety, and protection of all Americans. These programs include immunization, HIV prevention, chronic disease prevention and health promotion, infectious disease control, occupational safety and health, injury prevention and control, environmental health, and programs that reduce the occurrence of birth defects and developmental disabilities. CDC also supports bioterrorism and emergency response activities. Funding for these activities is included in the Public Health and Social Services Emergency Fund provided to CDC from the Office of the Secretary of Health and Human Services. The budget request for the 317 immunization program assumes enactment of a legislative proposal that reduces the discretionary request by $110 million.

The budget includes legislative proposals for the Vaccines for Children (VFC) program to expand access to immunizations for VFC-eligible children. Legislation amending the Vaccines for Children program will be proposed to allow underinsured children to receive immunizations at state and local public health clinics and to lift the price cap on the tetanus-diphtheria booster. These proposals will result in approximately $110 million in savings from the CDC discretionary 317 immunization program. The budget request for the 317 program assumes enactment of this proposal.

This program funds biomedical research and research training. These accounts will continue to be appropriated separately, and are displayed in a consolidated format to improve the readability of the presentation. Detailed information is available through the Department of Health and Human Services.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) is working to meet the management challenges that can arise when an agency receives a substantial infusion of resources over a short period of time. NIH is in the process of identifying strategies and policies that could be implemented in 2004 and beyond to maximize budgetary and management flexibility in the future. Such strategies include funding the total costs of an increasing number of new grants in the grant's first year and managing grant average cost increases.

This program provides Federal support for treatment and prevention in the areas of alcoholism, drug abuse, and mental health. The Administration has proposed to retain the language of the HHS General Provisions dealing with the penalty in Sec. 1926 of the Public Health Service Act, known as the Synar Amendment. The only penalty allowed under the current law is disproportionately severe, and could penalize those needing substance abuse services. The Administration looks forward to working with Congress to achieve a permanent statutory change that would establish a more fair and sustainable penalty structure.

Section 203 provides funding for Medicaid infrastructure grants to support the design, establishment and operation of State infrastructures to help working people with disabilities purchase health coverage through Medicaid. Section 204 provides funding for States to establish Demonstrations to Maintain Independence and Employment, which will provide Medicaid benefits and services to working individuals who have a condition that, without medical assistance, will result in disability. Part of Title II of the Trade Act of 2002 (P.L. 107-210) amends the Public Health Service Act by adding section 2745, which addresses promotion of qualified high-risk pools for assisting "high-risk" individuals who may find private health insurance unavailable, unaffordable, or undesirable. This section establishes: (1) seed grants to states for the creation and initial operation of a qualified high-risk pool for those states that do not have one as of the legislative enactment, and (2) grants to states for operation of qualified high-risk pools.

Note.—The reimbursable program (HCFAC) in the Administration on Aging (AoA) reflects the estimated distribution of the allocation account for fiscal years 2003 and 2004. Actual 2003 and 2004 distributions will be determined by the Secretary of HHS and the Attorney General.

Administration on Aging.—The proposed level will provide continued funding for core formula grant programs that provide nutrition, supportive services and caregiver support services through the aging network. AoA programs are part of a comprehensive system of support for older people and their families. The proposed level also includes funding for the White House Conference on Aging.

In order to improve program management, the budget proposes to transfer the smaller Department of Agriculture nutrition program for the elderly to AoA, while preserving State access to commodities and ensuring that the funds continue to be dedicated exclusively to the provision of meals. Although both Departments currently fund these services, HHS is the lead agency and has greater interaction with service providers. This transfer will improve program oversight and streamline reporting requirements.

The Office of Inspector General (OIG) identifies and recommends actions to correct fraud, waste, and abuse in HHS administered and assisted programs and operations through audits and investigations.

In addition to the discretionary resources appropriated to the OIG, the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 makes available mandatory funding for use by the OIG. These funds are used to combat Medicare, Medicaid, and State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP) fraud and abuse through a coordinated Health care fraud and abuse control (HCFAC) program with the Department of Justice. The following table shows total funding resources for the OIG:

The mission of the new Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services is to deliver services to the public in a timely, consistent, fair and high quality manner. This activity encompasses efforts to (1) establish and maintain an asylum process that is fair and timely, and that denies meritless claims quickly without discouraging legitimate seekers of asylum, (2) establish and maintain immigration and naturalization processes that deliver benefits to customers in a fair, accurate and timely manner, (3) make "user friendly" customer service an integral, permanent aspect of all activities, and (4) provide employers, benefit providers and other appropriate entities with immigration information and alien status, and the assistance and tools needed to allow them to comply with the laws while safeguarding the civil and privacy rights of citizens and aliens alike. The 2004 Budget continues to support a five-year, $500 million initiative to support a universal six-month processing standard for all immigration applications.

Among the missions of the Directorate of Border and Transportation Security is to prevent, preempt, and deter aggression targeted at the U.S. through land, sea, and air ports-of-entry. The Customs and Border Protection account includes funding for inspecting travelers at land, sea, and air ports-of-entry for immigration, customs and agriculture compliance, as well as interdicting illegal crossers between ports-of-entry. This account consolidates funding previously provided for specific functions of the U.S. Customs Service; specific functions of the Immigration and Naturalization Service including Border Patrol, intelligence, inspections, and related administrative functions; and the inspections function of the Agriculture Quarantine and Inspection (AQI) program, formerly part of the Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. The realignment of border and safety functions will improve the government's efficiency and effectiveness through consolidated overhead, training, information technology, equipment, communications, and oversight.

Funding provided through this account will ensure that the Department of Homeland Security is able to enforce the laws regarding admission of foreign-born persons into the U.S., and ensuring that all goods and persons entering and exiting the U.S. do so legally.

The Federal Law Enforcement Training Center provides the necessary facilities, equipment, and support services for conducting recruit, advanced, specialized, and refresher training for Federal law enforcement personnel. Center personnel conduct the instructional programs for the basic recruit and some of the advanced training. This appropriation is for operating expenses of the Center, for research in law enforcement training methods, and curriculum content. In addition, the Center has a reimbursable program to accommodate the training requirements of various Federal agencies. As funds are available, law enforcement training is provided to certain State, local and foreign law enforcement personnel on a space-available basis.

The 2004 Budget continues funding for the Center to work with other Federal law enforcement agencies to establish written standards for the accreditation of Federal law enforcement training.

This account provides for the acquisition and related costs for expansion and maintenance of facilities of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center.

This includes funding for the Facilities Master Plan, Minor Construction and Maintenance, Firearms Environmental Restoration and Reconstruction, Environmental Compliance, and installation of fiber optics communications systems. The Master Plan provides the long range blueprint for expansion of facilities to meet the training requirements of the over 76 partner organizations. Minor construction and maintenance provides alterations and maintenance funding for approximately 300 buildings at three locations (Glynco, Georgia, Artesia, New Mexico, and Cheltenham, Maryland). The Firearms Environmental Restoration and Reconstruction funds the clean-up of the existing outdoor ranges and reconstruction. The Environmental Compliance funds are to ensure compliance with the EPA and State environmental laws and regulations. The fiber optics funding will be used to replace the existing antiquated twisted copper wire telecommunications system with a state-of-the-art fiber optic telecommunications cable system.

The Office for Domestic Preparedness (ODP) provides state and local governments with grants, training, and technical assistance to improve their readiness for terrorism incidents. Most of this assistance is aimed at strengthening "first responders," police, fire, rescue, and emergency personnel who are first on scene in the event of a terrorist attack. In addition to ODP's existing preparedness programs, the 2004 Budget requests significant grant funding for both fire departments and law enforcement anti-terrorism initiatives. ODP will also provide up to $181 million for Citizen Corps activities.

The ODP account reflects the program structure specified in Public Law 107-296, the Homeland Security Act of 2002, which transferred ODP out of the Department of Justice and into the DHS Border and Transportation Security Directorate. The Act also merged FEMA's Office of National Preparedness with ODP.

This account consolidates funding previously requested in the Coast Guard Operating Expenses, Environmental Compliance and Restoration, and Reserve Training accounts. Funding requested in this account provides for the safety of the public, and the Coast Guard's work force, with an enhanced emphasis on its maritime homeland security mission.

The bulk of the funding requested in this account supports the operations of the Coast Guard as it carries out its unique duties as a peacetime operating agency and a branch of the armed forces. To fulfill its mission, the Coast Guard employs multipurpose vessels, aircraft, and shore units, strategically located along the coasts and inland waterways of the United States and in selected areas overseas.

Additionally, a portion of the funding requested in this account will be used by the Coast Guard to satisfy environmental compliance and restoration related obligations arising under chapter 19 of title 14 of the United States Code.

Finally, another portion of the funding requested in this account will support the Coast Guard Reserve Forces, which provide qualified personnel and trained units for active duty in event of conflict, national emergency, or natural and man-made disasters. The reservists maintain their readiness through mobilization exercises, and duty alongside regular Coast Guard members during routine and emergency operations. Reservists will continue to serve as a cost-effective surge force for response to human and natural disasters.

The majority of the funding requested in this account provides for the acquisition, construction, and improvement of vessels, aircraft, information management resources, shore facilities, and aids to navigation required to execute the Coast Guard's missions and achieve its performance goals.

Vessels.—In 2004, the Coast Guard will continue to acquire multi-mission platforms that use advanced technology to reduce life cycle operating costs. The Great Lakes icebreaking replacement project will continue.

Deepwater.—The Deepwater capability replacement project continues with full scale development. In 2004, the Coast Guard will continue to acquire and build the selected integrated deepwater system.

Other Equipment.—In 2004, the Coast Guard will invest in numerous management information and decision support systems that will result in increased efficiencies. Rescue 21, the national distress and response system modernization project (NDRSMP), will continue.

Shore Facilities.—In 2004, the Coast Guard will invest in modern structures that are more energy-efficient, comply with regulatory codes, minimize follow-on maintenance requirements and replace existing dilapidated structures.

Additional funding requested in this account supports the Coast Guard's Research and Development program, which includes the development of techniques, methods, hardware, and systems which directly contribute to increasing the productivity and effectiveness of Coast Guard's operating missions. The Coast Guard has focused new R&D projects on improvements to maritime homeland security in the port domain while continuing research in other vital Coast Guard mission areas, including marine environmental protection and response; risk assessment and competency; and human error reduction and fatigue analysis. No new funding is requested for alteration of bridges in 2004.

This account provides grants for the development and implementation of a coordinated national recreational boating safety program. Boating safety statistics reflect the success in meeting the program's objectives. No discretionary appropriation is requested for 2004 from the Boat safety account of the Aquatic resources trust fund. The Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (TEA-21) provides funding from the Aquatic resources trust fund of $64 million annually beginning in 1999. Of this total, $59 million is provided for grants to States and $5 million is available for Coast Guard coordination of the national boating safety program.

The Oil spill liability trust fund is used to finance oil pollution prevention and cleanup activities by various Federal agencies. In accordance with the provisions of the Oil Pollution Act of 1990, the Fund may finance annually up to $50 million of emergency resources and all valid claims from injured parties resulting from oil spills. For Coast Guard, this funds the following accounts: Trust fund share of expenses, Oil spill recovery, and Payment of claims. The Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989, Public Law 101-239, triggered collection of a 5 cent tax on each barrel of oil produced domestically or imported to be deposited into the Oil spill liability trust fund. The authority to collect the oil barrel tax expired on December 31, 1994.

Through the Disaster Relief Fund (DRF), the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) provides a significant portion of the total Federal response to victims in Presidentially-declared major disasters and emergencies. Major disasters are declared when a State requests Federal assistance and proves that a given disaster is beyond the State's capacity to respond. Under the DRF, DHS will continue to operate the primary assistance programs formerly run by the Federal Emergency Management Agency: Federal assistance to individuals and households, and public assistance, which includes the repair and reconstruction of State, local, and non-profit infrastructure. For 2004, a new competitive, pre-disaster mitigation grant program has been proposed to replace the current hazard mitigation grants funded in the Disaster Relief Fund.

Public Law 107-73 authorized the transfer of $25 million from the Disaster Relief Fund and $7 million from National Flood Insurance Fund policyholder fees collected but unexpended during 2000 through 2001 to the Flood Map Modernization Fund for use in 2002 to update and modernize the inventory of over 100,000 flood maps. The flood maps are used to determine appropriate risk-based premium rates for the National Flood Insurance Program, complete flood hazard determinations required of the nation's lending institutions, and to develop appropriate disaster response plans for Federal, State, and local emergency management personnel. In 2004, the Budget proposes a $200 million appropriation to modernize and digitize flood maps.

The National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, as amended, authorizes the Federal Government to provide flood insurance on a national basis. Flood insurance may be sold or continued in force only in communities which enact and enforce appropriate floodplain management measures. Communities must participate in the program within one year of the time they are identified as flood-prone in order to be eligible for flood insurance and some forms of Federal financial assistance for acquisition or construction purposes. In addition, Federally regulated funding institutions can not provide loans to non-participating communities with an identified flood hazard.

In 2004, the budget assumes collection of all of the administrative and program costs associated with flood insurance activities from policy holders. Under the emergency program, structures in identified flood-prone areas are eligible for limited amounts of coverage at subsidized insurance rates. Under the regular program, studies must be made of different flood risks in flood-prone areas to establish actuarial premium rates. These rates are charged for insurance on new construction. Coverage is available on virtually all types of buildings and their contents in amounts up to $350,000 for residential and $1 million for other types.

Disaster assistance loans authorized by the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5121 et seq.) are loans to States for the non-Federal portion of cost-sharing funds and community disaster loans to local governments incurring substantial loss of tax and other revenues as a result of a major disaster. The funds requested for this program include direct loans and a subsidy based on criteria including loan amount and interest charged. As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis. Loan activity prior to FY 1992, which is budgeted for on a cash basis, totals less than $500,000 in every year and is not presented separately.

Appropriations in this title support the advance of homeland security through basic and applied research, fabrication of technology demonstration devices, development and testing of prototypes and full-scale pre-production hardware, the procurement of products, systems and other capital equipment necessary for the provision and upgrading of capabilities to detect, destroy, dispose and mitigate the effects of weapons of mass destruction and other terrorist weapons and the operation of the Science and Technology Directorate. These appropriations also fund work of the Science and Technology Directorate as it supports the other Directorates and activities of the Department in developing, acquiring and fielding equipment and procedures necessary for performing their missions. This work may be performed by contractors, government laboratories and facilities, universities and non-profit organizations. Research, development and operations programs are funded to cover annual needs. Acquisition programs will be budgeted in useful segments, so that further appropriations will not be needed to provide a useful capability from the acquired equipment or facilities.

The 2004 budget provides for major technology and development efforts, including detection, destruction, disposal and mitigation of chemical and biological agents, radiological and nuclear devices or weapons, and conventional explosives. Funding also is provided for the test and evaluation of technologies, systems and processes developed to counter these threats and for the acquisition of equipment and operations needed to field those technologies, systems and processes, as well as others that may be available without further development, as part of the counter-WMD and counter-terror activities of the Department.

Research and development and acquisition funds for each fiscal year will be available for obligation for a three-year period beginning on the first day of the fiscal year for which the funds are appropriated.

This account supports the Directorate of Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection (IAIP). IAIP is charged with:

- Analyzing law enforcement, intelligence, and other information to evaluate terrorist threats to the homeland;
- Assessing the vulnerabilities of key U.S. resources and critical infrastructures;
- Mapping threat information against our current vulnerabilities; and,
- Working with federal, state, local, and private stakeholders to issue timely warnings and take or effect appropriate preventive and protective action.

Activities proposed for FY 2004 include:

Undersecretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection.—Coordinates efforts to improve the collection and dissemination of terrorist threat information domestically, fuse and integrate that data with foreign intelligence to produce a comprehensive picture of threats to the United States, and develop and implement an action plan to mitigate terrorist threats and national vulnerabilities.

National Planning.—Works with federal, state, local, and private stakeholders to develop and implement an integrated national plan for the physical and cyber protection of critical infrastructures and key assets.

Indications and Warning Advisories.—Provides a 24/7 Intelligence and Warning capability. Reviews and disseminates information to relevant public and private sector entities, and provides a mechanism for the Secretary to issue national advisories through the Homeland Security Advisory System.

Competitive Analysis and Evaluation.— Supports an internal unit to provide alternative analysis and unbiased evaluation of all IAIP analytic judgments and findings. This will ensure the quality and depth of IAIP products.

Threat Determination and Assessment.—Supports day-to-day operations of IAIP unit to a) access and analyze information on threats and terrorist capabilities from the intelligence community, law enforcement agencies, and other federal, state, local, and private entities b) integrate threat analysis against vulnerabilities of infrastructures, national assets, and people, c) share actionable threat analysis with federal, state, and local government and law enforcement agencies and private sector entities, and d) identify and prioritize information gaps for collectors. This activity includes IAIP information management processes, such as information collection and prioritization, and security clearance and release procedures.

Infrastructure Vulnerability and Risk Assessment.—Includes funding to support:

- Development and maintenance of a complete and accurate mapping of the Nation’s critical infrastructure and key assets.
- Transportation and port vulnerability assessments, performed in cooperation with the Transportation Security Administration and the United States Coast Guard.
- Specialized vulnerability assessment teams to conduct field assessments and catalog specific vulnerabilities of critical assets.
- Comprehensive national risk analysis activities, including modeling, data-mining, and partnerships with the scientific and academic communities to develop and refine DHS analytical tools and processes.

Work will be performed in cooperation with other DHS directorates.

Remediation and Protective Actions.—Includes funding to support:

- Infrastructure and key asset protective measures. IAIP will work with states and industry to identify and prioritize protective measures to mitigate risks identified through threat-vulnerability-consequence mapping. Protective measures may include technical assistance, grants, or cooperative agreements.
- Port vulnerability mitigation measures. IAIP will work with the Transportation Security Administration, the United States Coast Guard, and other governmental and non-governmental stakeholders, to mitigate risks identified through port vulnerability assessments and threat mapping. Mitigation measures may include technical assistance, grants, or cooperative agreements.
- Red Teaming activities. IAIP will use “red teams”—employees who simulate terrorists’ thinking—to monitor and evaluate the measures taken to protect certain key assets, critical infrastructure facilities, or sectors.

- Integrated Physical and Cyber Infrastructure Coordination. Monitoring status of critical infrastructures and coordinating prioritization across infrastructures for response, recovery, and reconstitution to augment the activities of the Emergency Preparedness and Response Directorate.
- Cyber Security. Technical planning, vulnerability assessments and mapping, and coordination for the development and maintenance of technical standards, guidelines, best practices and R&D requirements for computer and information systems.

Work will be performed in cooperation with other DHS directorates.

National Communications System.—The National Communications System (NCS) is directed by Executive Order to assist the President, the National Security Council, the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget in the exercise of the telecommunications functions and responsibilities. NCS provides the planning for and provision of national security and emergency preparedness telecommunications for the federal government under all circumstances, including crisis or emergency, attack, recovery and reconstitution. NCS operates a number of programs to ensure that telecommunications systems can support first responders and officials during an emergency.

Outreach and Partnerships.—Funds outreach, planning, and training activities to encourage partnerships with state and local governments, private sector partners, and international governments and organizations (to support trans-border infrastructure protection activities).

Pursuant to the Homeland Security Act of 2002, the functions of the National Communications System (Department of Defense), Federal Computer Incident Response Center (General Services Administration), Critical Infrastructure Assurance Office (Department of Commerce), National Simulation and Analysis Center and energy security and assurance programs (Department of Energy), and parts of the National Infrastructure Protection Center (Department of Justice), are transferred to IAIP. The activities of these offices, excluding the National Communications System, are integrated into the activities listed above.

DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

This chapter presents the budget estimates and program justifications for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). HUD's core mission is to increase homeownership, support community development, and increase access to affordable housing free from discrimination. The 2004 Budget for HUD reflects the continuation of a multi-year comprehensive reform effort that will enhance the effectiveness of programs, reduce high unobligated and obligated balances, and return HUD to its core mission. Congress has provided significant increases in several HUD programs over the past several years.

The Department continues to emphasize expanding homeownership opportunities for all. In addition, borrowers who because of poor credit would be served at higher cost by the conventional market or not at all may take advantage of a new FHA mortgage product that rewards "good behavior" by reducing borrower mortgage insurance premiums by one percentage point after a series of consecutive on-time mortgage payments. Housing counseling increases by $10 million. Also, the HOME Investment Partnerships Program is increased by $113 million. This increase includes $200 million for the down payment initiative. The 2004 budget continues the expanded Self-Help Homeownership Opportunity Program (SHOP) in an effort to accelerate home ownership by lower-income families.

The 2004 budget proposes to allow housing authorities to use up to $131 million to reform the public housing subsidy system in a manner similar to the President's 2003 proposal.

The budget provides a means by which Public Housing Authorities (PHAs) can privately finance the capital needs of properties that can be underwritten to market standards. A loan guarantee of up to 80 percent would be established as a credit enhancement to protect lenders in the case of default. Properties recapitalized under this new financing model would be converted to project-based vouchers. Conversion would allow capital needs to be financed on a property basis as is done in the private sector, and the project-based voucher program gives additional choice and mobility to residents in the selection of their housing. In addition, such conversion will facilitate PHA management and finance on a property-by-property basis and thus increase accountability for efficient management. Many housing authorities will take advantage of this voluntary initiative to improve living conditions for their residents.

The 2004 Budget proposes the Housing Assistance for Needy Families (HANF) program. Housing vouchers will be converted to a State run block grant and will continue to assist at least the same number of low-income families. Administration by states will better assist low-income households to locate decent, safe, and affordable housing by allowing them to tailor programs to fit the needs of particular communities. Coordination by states with Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) programs will be encouraged to better reach families transitioning from welfare to work. States will provide better program administration adapted to their needs, leading to better utilization of funds to help more low-income households secure housing. The Department will also continue to fully renew contracts to assist rental of low-income elderly units in the Housing for the Elderly Program (under Section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959).

HUD continues to focus on combating homelessness and in addition eliminating chronic homelessness over a ten-year period with $1.375 billion for the Homeless Assistance program overall. The effort includes a $50 million Samaritan housing program that will be jointly administered with the Departments of Health and Human Services and Veterans Affairs focused on compassionate and effective assistance for chronically homeless persons. Funding also supports a consolidated comprehensive homeless effort, including Shelter Plus Care renewals, and support for the leadership of the Inter-agency Council on Homelessness.

The transfer of the Emergency Food and Shelter Program from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), to HUD contributes to the ongoing effort to better coordinate overall homeless program efforts.

Funding in the 2004 budget for the Fair Housing Assistance and Fair Housing Initiatives programs (FHAP and FHIP) will strengthen the ability of public and private fair housing groups, and partnerships between them, to enforce the laws protecting all Americans against illegal housing discrimination.

With the publication of the National Discrimination Study HUD now has the information necessary to improve enforcement, reduce discrimination and address accessibility issues.

The Community Development Block Grant program is funded at $4.7 billion with $4.4 billion for formula grants. The CDBG Formula is significantly impacted by the Census and other factors. The Department is pursuing proposals that would better reflect current data, fiscal need, levels of poverty, and effective use of funds.

HUD is one of five Departments that are leading the Federal Government in tapping the potential of faith-based and community organizations to improve housing and help develop communities.

The 2004 budget includes a 10 percent increase in lead hazard reduction grants to continue the 10-year program to eradicate lead hazards in housing.

In order to ensure the effective implementation of its programs, the Department's Office of Policy Development and Research (PD&R) will be provided with funds necessary to ensure timely provision of data, provide research and analysis of national housing and economic conditions, and measure the performance of programs, consistent with the Government Performance and Results Act of 1994.

The Department will continue the management reform effort initiated in 2001 and undertake further efforts in 2004 to refocus HUD on its core mission and key programs as part of a continuing series of planned reforms to improve program performance.

any other provision of law, the Secretary shall renew expiring section 8 subsidy contracts for each public housing agency (PHA) based on the most recent information the Secretary determines to be available and reliable regarding the total number of unit months under lease (and including (A) unit months representing units to be leased under existing contracts or agreements to enter into contracts for PHA project-based assistance, and (B) for agencies participating in the Moving to Work demonstration, unit months representing section 8 subsidy contracts committed to fulfill requirements for specific numbers of vouchers specified in existing agreements), and by applying an inflation factor based on local or regional factors to the actual per unit cost reported.

(2) $609,000,000 for a central fund to be allocated by the Secretary for the support of section 8 subsidy contracts or amendments to such contracts, and for such other purposes as are set forth in this paragraph: Provided, That the Secretary may use amounts in such fund, as necessary, for contracts or contract amendments resulting from a significant change in the total number of unit months under lease, a significant change in per-unit costs, or otherwise to provide funds so that public housing agencies may lease units up to their allocation baselines: Provided further, That the Secretary shall use amounts in such fund to provide States with up to $100,000,000 as determined by the Secretary, for costs associated with developing the capacity of States to assume the administration of the Housing Assistance for Needy Families program: Provided further, That the Secretary shall use up to $36,000,000 in such fund for incremental vouchers under section 8 of the Act to be used for non-elderly disabled families affected by the designation of a public housing development under section 7 of the Act, the establishment of preferences in accordance with section 651 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13611), or the restriction of occupancy to elderly families in accordance with section 658 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 13618): Provided further, That to the extent the Secretary determines that amounts in such fund are sufficient for purposes set forth in the three immediately preceding provisos, the Secretary may make any remaining amounts in such fund available to States for section 8 tenant-based rental and homeownership assistance: Provided further, That any State using amounts pursuant to the preceding proviso for section 8 tenant-based rental and homeownership assistance, shall administer such assistance in accordance with section 8 statutory and regulatory requirements: Provided further, That a State may petition the Secretary, and the Secretary may waive any statutory or regulatory provision pertaining to such rental or homeownership assistance and may make provision for alternative conditions or terms where appropriate where the Secretary determines that such waiver will improve performance relative to the objectives of such assistance when administered by a State: Provided further, That a State may petition the Secretary with respect to rental or homeownership assistance administered by a public housing agency in the State, and the Secretary may waive any regulation pertaining to such assistance and may make provision for alternative conditions or terms where appropriate where the Secretary determines that such waiver will improve performance relative to the objectives of such assistance: Provided further, That the Secretary may allocate and distribute any such remaining amounts to States or public housing agencies notwithstanding section 213(d) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

(3) $252,203,000 for section 8 rental assistance for relocation and replacement of housing units that are demolished or disposed of pursuant to the Omnibus Consolidated Recissions and Appropriations Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-134), conversion of section 23 projects to assistance under section 8, the family unification program under section 8(x) of the Act, relocation of witnesses in connection with efforts to combat crime in public and assisted housing pursuant to a request from a law enforcement or prosecution agency, enhanced vouchers under any provision of law authorizing such assistance under section 8(t) of the Act (42 U.S.C. 1437f(t)), and tenant protection assistance, including replacement and relocation assistance.

(4) $72,000,000 for Family Self-Sufficiency Coordinators.

(5) $1,192,382,000 for administrative and other expenses of public housing agencies in administering the section 8 tenant-based rental assistance program: Provided, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, administrative fees shall be paid only for dwelling units covered by a section 8 housing assistance payments contract and such fees shall be paid at a rate that for each public housing agency shall not exceed 10 percent of the total annual budget authority applicable for rental and homeownership assistance to such units leased by the public housing agency: Provided further, That all such administrative fee amounts provided under this paragraph shall be only for activities related to the provision of rental and homeownership assistance under section 8:

Provided further, That upon advance notice to the Committees on Appropriations the Secretary may transfer funds provided under paragraphs (1), (2) or (5) among such paragraphs, if the Secretary determines that such action is necessary because the funding authorized under one such paragraph otherwise would be depleted and as a result, the maximum utilization of section 8 tenant-based assistance with the funds appropriated for this purpose by this Act would not be feasible: Provided further, That, hereafter, the Secretary shall require public housing agencies to submit accounting data for funds disbursed under this heading by source of funds: Provided further, That an additional $4,200,000,000 shall be available on October 1, 2004 and remain available until expended: Provided further, That $1,072,000,000 from unobligated balances remaining from funds appropriated to the Department of Housing and Urban Development under the heading "Housing certificate fund" or the heading "Annual contribution for assisted housing" shall be transferred to and merged with the amounts provided under this heading.

Housing Assistance for Needy Families. This proposal establishes a new block grant program to States called Housing Assistance for Needy Families (HANF). The Department will be submitting a comprehensive legislative proposal to authorize this proposal. When the proposed legislation is adopted, this block grant program will replace the current tenant-based Housing Choice Voucher Program. Converting the current program to a block grant approach is necessary to improve the delivery of rental and homeownership subsidies for low-income families and eliminate the significant utilization and recapture problems that plague the current tenant-based program.

Fiscal year 2004 will be a transitional year in which HUD will provide voucher payments directly to Public Housing Agencies (PHAs) currently managing the program to cover units leased. HUD will also remit payment to PHAs for administrative fees. States will use fiscal year 2004 as the transition year to ramp up with staff and systems.

A Central Fund will be available for use to: (1) fund State start-up costs; (2) support leasing up to the baseline; (3) and fund additional units in PHAs or States that have utilized one hundred percent of allocated funds.

Contract Renewals. Contract renewals provide funding to renew expiring rental assistance contracts covering certificates, vouchers (including project-based vouchers), and moderate rehabilitation. The account also includes $72 million in funding for Family Self-Sufficiency Coordinators.

Incremental Rental Assistance.—For 2004, the Department is requesting $36 million in budget authority for approximately 5,500 vouchers for persons with disabilities. Additional funding for tenant-based housing assistance may become available in the central reserve fund.

PIH Tenant Protection Vouchers.—The Housing Assistance for Needy Families account will continue to support families living in public and assisted housing units affected by changes in the status of the units. Income-eligible families who are affected by the demolition, disposition, revitalization or other capital improvements through no fault of their own, will continue to be eligible to receive relocation/replacement vouchers.

Housing Tenant Protection Vouchers.—The Housing Assistance for Needy Families account will also continue supporting families in FHA-insured, privately owned assisted housing projects affected by changes in project status. It is intended that income-eligible families who, through no fault of their own, are affected by HUD's management of the multifamily inventory or owner's decision to prepay their mortgage or opt-out of project-based section 8 contracts, be aided through HANF.

Proposed minimum rent.—A new minimum rent of $50 a month is proposed for recipients of low-income housing assistance. This would apply to households headed by an able-bodied working age individual. It is intended to promote work and increase equity in the treatment of recipient households with similar needs.

Funding requested in 2004 under this account is only for project-based rental assistance contract renewals and supporting activities in contract administration and information technology spending under the Working Capital Fund. Spending from obligated balances resulting from Housing Certificate Fund appropriations in 2003 and prior will continue to be shown under this account.

Contract Renewals. Contract renewals provide funding to renew expiring Section 8 rental assistance contracts covering Loan Management, New Construction/Substantial Rehabilitation, Property Disposition, and Preservation, and contracts authorized under section 441 of the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act.

The Moving-to-Work demonstration provides unprecedented autonomy and flexibility to a select group of high-performing public housing authorities (PHAs) in order to assess the potential impacts of Federal deregulation on resident households, housing developments, and local housing programs. Through waivers of requirements of the 1937 Housing Act, as amended, and related Federal regulations, participating PHAs can combine Federal funding allocated for public housing operating subsidy, capital subsidy, and Section 8 vouchers into a flexible housing assistance fund. PHAs may provide incentives to families that work, are seeking work, or are preparing for work, PHAs are also allowed to change administrative procedures and management policies so they can reallocate resources to better address local housing needs and priorities. No additional funding is being requested for this demonstration.

The Public Housing Capital Fund, a comprehensive formula-driven program based on need, is designed to respond to the capital and management improvement requirements of public housing. The fund is a consolidation of the following programs: public housing modernization; public housing development; Major Reconstruction of Obsolete Public Housing Projects (MROP); and public housing amendments.

Of the $2.6 billion requested for the Public Housing Capital Fund, approximately $2.3 billion is provided to cover annual accrual needs. Up to $131 million may be used for partial loan guarantees for a new initiative that has the promise to address the public housing capital backlog by enabling housing authorities to privately finance their properties. Other uses include up to $40 million to provide supportive services to public housing residents under the Resident Opportunities and Supportive Services (ROSS) program, up to $40 million for emergencies or disasters, up to $50 million for technical assistance, up to $30 million for demolition, site revitalization, replacement housing, and tenant based assistance grants, and no less than $10.61 million for the Working Capital Fund.

The budget provides a means by which Public Housing Authorities (PHAs) can privately finance the capital needs of properties that can be underwritten to market standards. A loan guarantee of 80 percent would be established as a credit enhancement to protect lenders in the case of default. Properties recapitalized under this new financing model would be converted to project-based vouchers. Conversion would allow capital needs to be financed on a property basis as is done in the private sector, and the project-based voucher program gives additional choice and mobility to residents in the selection of their housing. In addition, such conversion will facilitate PHA management and finance on a property-by-property basis and thus increase accountability for efficient management, and will relate ongoing Federal subsidies more closely to the rental market. Many housing authorities should be able to take advantage of this voluntary initiative to improve the living conditions of their residents and their own management.

Legislation is being proposed to accompany this proposal. It provides changes in the applicability of the project-based voucher so that the program is workable for current public housing sites; allows for partial loan guarantees; and authorizes the use of up-front capital contributions where necessary.

Operating subsidies are provided to public housing authorities (PHAs) to assist in funding the operation and maintenance expenses of public housing units in accordance with Section 9(e) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended.

The following tables display the sources of housing authorities' expected revenue and expenditures by category. The distribution is based on historical data reported by housing authorities to HUD on the Statement of Operating Receipts and Expenditures.

Sources of Housing Authorities' Operating Revenue (in millions of dollars)

Operating Subsidies.—Represent HUD's contributions to a housing authority's operating budget. Under the current formula-based approach, HUD sets a formula-determined allowable expense level (AEL) for each PHA and separately computes utility and audit costs. The PHA's dwelling rental income is also projected and the subsidy is the difference between the projected AEL, utility, and audit expenses and projected dwelling rental income.

Dwelling Rental.—Income derived from tenants' rents.

Investment Income.—Income from interest earned on general fund investments.

Other Income.—Includes income from other sources such as renting rooftop space for signs or broadcasting and from operating services for tenants, such as laundromats or day care centers.

The Public Housing Drug Elimination Grants program was terminated in the 2002 Budget. The program was found to have limited impact; current regulatory tools, such as eviction, are effective in reducing drug-related crime in public housing; and finally, fighting crime and drugs is not directly related to HUD's core mission—it is the mission of federal law enforcement and other agencies whose programs help combat illegal drugs and crime in public housing communities. PHAs can supplement other public housing security efforts using operating funds if they choose.

No additional funds are requested for this program in 2004. This program utilized Federal resources to rehabilitate and restore severely distressed public housing projects, thereby expanding the supply of decent, safe, and affordable housing for low-income individuals and families. The funds were used for project demolition, hard replacement units, and tenant-based rental assistance.

Title I of the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act (NAHASDA) of 1996 (P.L. 104-330) authorized the Native American Housing Block Grant program. This program provides an allocation of funds on a formula basis to Indian tribes and their tribally designated housing entities to help them address housing needs within their communities.

The Native American Housing Block Grant program includes a guaranteed loan provision (Title VI). A guarantee level of $8 million is proposed for this loan guarantee program for 2004. The subsidy rate for this program is set at 10.56 percent with a federal guarantee of 80 percent. A primary goal of the Title VI program is to encourage private lenders to provide financing in Indian country. Therefore, the program provides for the federal guarantee of notes or other obligations issued by Indian tribes or tribally designated housing entities for the purpose of financing affordable housing activities described in section 202 of the Act.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the loan guarantees committed in 1998 and beyond (including modifications of guarantees that resulted from obligations in any given year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

The Hawaiian Homelands Homeownership Act of 2000 (P.L. 106-568) amended the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996 by adding Title VIII, which authorized the Native Hawaiian Housing Block Grant program. This program provides an allocation of funds to assist and promote affordable housing activities to develop, maintain and operate affordable housing for eligible low-income Native Hawaiian families.

It authorizes annual grants to the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands (DHHL) for housing and housing-related assistance, pursuant to an annual housing plan, within the area in which DHHL is authorized to provide that assistance. DHHL uses performance measures and benchmarks that are consistent with the national goals of the program, but it can base these measures on the needs and priorities that it establishes in its five- and one-year housing plans.

The Low-Rent Public Housing Loan Fund provides direct Federal loans to fund remaining Public Housing Agency and Indian Housing Authority construction, acquisition, and modernization activities reserved under the Annual Contributions appropriation through 1986. These loans are made by borrowing from the Treasury. Under legislation enacted during 1986 (Public Law 99-272), amounts borrowed from the Treasury are forgiven at the end of each fiscal year and the loans to PHAs/IHAs are forgiven as construction, acquisition, and modernization activities are completed. Under the provisions of this legislation, $25 million borrowed from the Treasury was forgiven in 2002, an estimated $40 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 2003, and an estimated $30 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 2004.

Since 1987, new reservations of capital funds for construction, acquisition, and modernization activities have been provided directly from the Public Housing Capital Fund appropriations.

The Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS program provides States and localities with resources and incentives to devise long-term comprehensive strategies for meeting the housing needs of persons with HIV/AIDS and their families.

Up to $3 million is used for technical assistance to grantees and project sponsors to strengthen management of programs and ensure responsiveness in meeting client needs. States and metropolitan areas receive 90 percent of the remaining funds by formula based on the number of cases of AIDS and, for metropolitan areas, the incidence of AIDS in that area. The final 10 percent is awarded competitively to States, local governments, and private nonprofit entities, including faith-based organizations, for projects of national significance with priority for renewal of the projects providing permanent supportive housing. Awards are also made to States and local governments for projects in jurisdictions which do not qualify for a formula allocation. The requested funding for 2004 will support an additional 1,250 households, for a total of approximately 74,250 housing units for persons with HIV/AIDS and their families.

Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes the Secretary to make grants to units of general local government under the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program and States to fund local community development programs.

The 2004 Budget allocates $72.5 million to Indian tribes as authorized by Section 106(a)(1) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. Since its inception, funds made available to Native American communities have supported a wide variety of community development activities, predominantly, but not exclusively, community facilities, infrastructure and buildings to help meet the basic needs of low and moderate income community members. Since the vast majority of eligible tribes and Alaska Native Villages have non-existent tax bases, this program has helped to finance those public facilities needed to maintain or establish community viability. While it has had a significant impact on many Native American communities throughout the Nation, basic community development needs throughout Indian Country remain substantial.

Seventy percent of CDBG formula funds are allocated to metropolitan cities and urban counties that receive their grants using the higher of two objective formulas. States and small cities receive 30 percent of the formula funds. The proposed level of funding for CDBG will support an estimated 90,000 jobs. These funds will also help to rehabilitate an estimated 185,000 housing units.

Section 107 Grants include funding for technical assistance to support local and State grantees including efforts to streamline the Consolidated Plan, program management and analytical support of information technology projects such as enhancements to the Integrated Disbursement and Information System (IDIS). Historically Black Colleges and Universities, Hispanic serving Institutions, the Community Development Work Study, Community Outreach Partnership Centers (COPC), Tribal Colleges and Universities and Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian Serving Institutions programs. There is also a legislative proposal to move the funding for the Insular areas out of Section 107 and into Section 106, the Formula program.

As authorized by Section 4 of the HUD Demonstration Act of 1993, the National Community Development Initiative (NCDI) helps build capacity of community-based development corporations and housing development organizations, and assist such corporations and organizations to carry out community development and affordable housing activities. The 2004 Budget includes $25 million for this program. In addition, $4.5 million is set aside for Habitat for Humanity capacity building programs. Both programs will target their efforts to increasing minority homeownership.

The Youthbuild program provides resources to educate, train and supply stipends for economically disadvantaged young adults through their participation in the construction and rehabilitation of housing for low-income and homeless families and individuals. The program expands the supply of affordable housing and, at the same time, enables high school drop-outs to obtain the education and employment skills necessary to achieve self-sufficiency. The 2004 request for $65 million will provide more than 3,728 young people with skills they need to obtain jobs. Funding of $65 million is provided for the Self-Help Homeownership Opportunity Program (Shop) including $3 million for technical assistance is targeted at very low-income populations. The three-fold increase reflects the growing capacity of self-help housing organizations to expand upon recent successes in making home ownership a viable option. In addition, $3 million is provided for the Housing Assistance Council as well as $2.2 million for the Native American Indian Housing Council to meet unserved rural and Native American housing needs.

The 2004 Budget also includes $3 million in competitive grants to Tribal Colleges and Universities (TCU) to provide resources to build, expand, renovate and equip facilities. In addition, $2.4 million is provided to assist Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian Serving institutions. A transfer of $4.9 million to the Working Capital Fund is included.

The Empowerment Zone (EZ) initiative helps revitalize city neighborhoods by attracting business development and providing employment opportunities to residents of empowerment zones. Empowerment Zone principles include a strategic vision for change, a community-based partnership, providing economic opportunity and sustainable community development.

The VA HUD Appropriations Act of 2001 (P.L. 106-377 and P.L. 106-554) provided $185 million for Round II Urban Empowerment Zones. The VA HUD Appropriations Act of 2002 (P.L. 107-73) provided $45 million for Round II Urban Empowerment Zones which brought the total funding for Round II urban EZs through 2002 to $330 million. No new funding is proposed for EZ's in FY 2004.

Funding has provided for a broad range of activities aimed at assisting residents, businesses and organizations in urban EZs, including: community policing; health care; neighborhood development; brownfields clean-up and redevelopment; support for financing of capital projects; education; work force preparation and job creation efforts linked to welfare reform; leveraging private sector resources, repayment of debt financing by municipal bonds; financing of projects in conjunction with the Section 108 loan guarantee program and other economic development projects; support for project-based rental assistance; and, financing other housing activities.

EZs are helping to stimulate billions of dollars in private investment, reviving inner city neighborhoods and supporting jobs, and helping families move from welfare to work.

The Community Renewal and Tax Relief Act of 2000 (P.L. 106-554) authorized the designation of a third round of 7 urban and 2 rural empowerment zones and 40 competitively selected Renewal Communities administered by HUD.

The 2004 Budget proposes no new funding for this program. The Brownfields Redevelopment initiative provided competitive economic development grants, in conjunction with Section 108 loan guarantees, for the redevelopment of qualified brownfield projects.

Grants are made in accordance with section 108(q) selection criteria and such other criteria deemed appropriate for brownfield projects, including the extent to which an applicant is currently operating a brownfields program and is working with appropriate environmental regulatory agencies.

The Brownfields Redevelopment initiative has received annual appropriations of $25 million since its inception in 1998.

This program provides assistance to States and units of local government, through formula allocation, expanding the supply and affordability of housing. Eligible activities include acquisition, rehabilitation, and new construction of housing and tenant-based rental assistance. The 2004 request will result in the production of 109,200 units of affordable housing through new construction, rehabilitation, or acquisition. In addition, tenant-based rental assistance will be provided for 13,335 units.

Funding of $25 million is included for a new competitive set-aside to demonstrate innovative local strategies targeted at making homes lead safe for low-income children. This initiative will involve private sector matching funds and will be evaluated so the lessons learned can be extended to the Lead Hazard Reduction program.

The HOME request also includes up to $2.1 million for systems development and related projects including improvements to the Integrated Disbursement and Information System (IDIS), funding for technical assistance, and $1 million for program management and analytical support.

The Homeless Assistance Grants program funds the Shelter Plus Care, Supportive Housing, Emergency Shelter Grants, and Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Single Room Occupancy programs. These funds will enable localities to shape and implement comprehensive, flexible, coordinated approaches to solving rather than institutionalizing homelessness. In fact, in recent years, many communities have made great strides in developing holistic approaches to solving homelessness. Requested funding would be available for a wide range of activities to assist homeless persons and prevent future homelessness, and will support the Department's effort to end chronic homelessness within a decade. The Administration will propose legislation to combine HUD's three competitive programs—Shelter Plus Care, Supportive Housing, and Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Single Room Occupancy into a single program with enough flexibility to meet community needs. The Department is also continuing to pursue expanded interagency efforts to meet the needs of the homeless.

Funding is also requested for technical assistance to provide needed assistance to grantees to resolve problems that hinder successful project completion and implementation, and for management information systems support, including the continuing operation of tracking systems required by House Report 105-610.

The Administration will submit legislation for the Samaritan Housing initiative, a new competitive grant program that supports the Administration's efforts to end chronic homelessness within a decade. Funding of $50 million for housing grants is requested in 2004 to support the most promising local strategies to move chronically homeless persons from the streets to safe permanent housing with supportive services. The Samaritan Housing initiative is part of a broader interagency Samaritan Initiative involving the Departments of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), Health and Human Services (HHS), and Veterans Affairs (VA) and other Federal agencies to end chronic homelessness.

Legislation will be submitted to transfer this program from the Federal Emergency Management Agency to HUD in order to consolidate emergency homeless assistance. The Emergency Food and Shelter program distributes funds rapidly and equitably to local jurisdictions to supplement community efforts to provide emergency food and shelter services. Funds will be obligated to a National Board, which will be chaired by HUD and whose non-profit partners (American Red Cross, The Salvation Army, United Way of America, and others) provide professional expertise. This National Board then works through similarly composed local boards to advertise the availability of funds, assess community needs, and make allocation choices. These community-based Local Boards also assure coordination of effort and development of systems to

As authorized by section 4 of the HUD Demonstration Act of 1993, this program provides funding to the National Community Development Initiative to build the capacity of community-based development corporations and housing development organizations and to assist such corporations and organizations to carry out community development and affordable housing activities. Funding for this program was provided under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account in 1996. Public Law 105-18 amended authorizing legislation to include additional eligible recipients and provided funding for this program through a transfer from the Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Grants account in 1997. Funding of $28 million was provided for this program in 2001 in Public Law 106-377 as a set-aside within the CDBG program. P.L. 107-73 provided $29 million for this program in 2002. Funding of $29.5 million is being requested in 2004, again as a set-aside within CDBG.

Shelter Plus Care provides rental assistance that, when combined with social services, supplies supportive housing for homeless people with disabilities and their families. Homeless people with disabilities often need more than shelter to live independently, such as medical care or other social services. Shelter Plus Care provides for a variety of housing choices such as group homes or individual units, coupled with a range of supportive services (which are funded by other sources). Grantees must match the rental assistance with supportive services that are at least equal in value to the amount of HUD's rental assistance. The Shelter Plus Care renewal funding renews contracts on a one-year basis and provides funding to amend contracts that were previously extended but which will run out of funding. The 2002 VA HUD Appropriations Act (P.L. 107-73) provided funding for Shelter Plus Care in the Homeless Assistance Grants account. Amounts provided in 2002 are sufficient to cover Shelter Plus Care Renewals in 2003. Shelter Plus Care Renewals are funded in the Homeless Assistance Grants account in 2004.

Guaranteed loans.—The Community Development Loan Guarantees program has provided a mechanism for the Federal guarantee of private loans. An accompanying liquidating account shows activity for Federal Financing Bank (FFB) direct loan activity, obligated prior to July 1, 1986. The following is a status of privately financed guaranteed loan commitments made prior to 1992. No funding is requested for new section 108 loans in 2004.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this non-budgetary account records all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of loan guarantees that resulted from commitments in any year). The amounts in this account are a means of financing and are not included in the budget totals. As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, no administrative expenses can be recorded in the financing account.

No funding is requested for new Section 108 loans in 2004. As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from Federal Financing Bank (FFB) direct loans for which loan guarantees were committed prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis.

Guaranteed loans.—Guaranteed loan assistance under the Community Development Loan Guarantees program was provided to eligible communities to finance economic development activities, housing rehabilitation, development or expansion of public facilities, acquisition of real property, rehabilitation of publicly owned real property, and certain related expenses. In the past, the FFB financed these guaranteed loans. The Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 required private financing of all loan guarantees committed after July 1, 1986. FFB will continue disbursing loans for commitments approved prior to July 1, 1986. The activity shown in the above account reflects privately financed guaranteed loans for which commitments were made prior to 1992.

This account consolidates activity under the Section 202 Housing for the Elderly Program and the Section 811 Housing for the Disabled Program. In 2004, housing for persons with disabilities is proposed as a separate account. A total of $773 million is proposed for housing for the elderly. Of this amount $30 million is for the capital grant program to convert existing 202 properties to assisted living under appropriate conditions. These funds for capital grants are available to existing HUD elderly subsidized (Section 202) projects that convert some or all units to Assisted Living.

$53.0 million is provided for a service coordinator program that will serve both residents of HUD-assisted elderly housing, other eligible elderly residing in the neighborhood in which such projects are located on an exception basis, and residents of projects assisted under section 811.

The budget proposes a new account for supportive housing for persons with disabilities. These funds were formerly combined with housing for the elderly in the Housing for Special Populations account. For 2004, the Administration will propose reforms to increase flexibility in the use of funds to provide more housing and strengthen program performance. Projects that are part of a strategy to end chronic homelessness by housing those disabled most at risk of homelessness will be given priority. In 2005, tenant based rental assistance provided in this program is proposed to be administered as part of the Housing Assistance for Needy Families (HANF) program.

HOUSING COUNSELING ASSISTANCE

The Housing Counseling Assistance Program provides comprehensive housing counseling services to eligible homeowners and tenants, including home purchase, financial management, and rental counseling. This program has been funded through a set-aside under the HOME program appropriation for the past several years.

The Housing Counseling Assistance Program supports the delivery of a wide variety of housing counseling services to homebuyers, homeowners, low-to moderate-income renters and the homeless. The primary objectives of the program are to expand homeownership opportunities, improve access to affordable housing and aid in HUD's commitment to bridging the gap of homeownership of minorities and other select groups in comparison to the National homeownership rate.

The Other Assisted Housing Account contains the programs listed below:

Rent supplement.—Rent supplement assistance payments will continue to be made on behalf of qualified low-income tenants in approximately 18,600 units which have not converted to section 8.

Section 235.—The Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983 (Public Law 98–181) authorized a restructured section 235 (Homeownership Assistance) program based on a 10-year interest reduction subsidy. This replaced earlier versions of the program, the original and the revised versions. All were below interest rate mortgages for single family homes.

Section 236.—The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, as amended, authorizes the section 236 Rental Housing Assistance Program which subsidizes the monthly mortgage payment that an owner of a rental or cooperative project is required to make. This interest subsidy reduces rents for lower income tenants.

IRP Rehab Grants.—Title V of the 1998 Appropriations Act (P.L. 105–65) establishes a program of rehabilitation grants for owners of eligible projects.

The table below reflects the consolidated outlay total for: the Housing Certificate Fund; the Public Housing Capital Fund; and the Other Assisted Housing account.

The Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Program provided affordable homeownership opportunities for low-income families. Units were converted to homeownership from public and Indian housing properties in HOPE 1, from FHA-insured and Government-held multi-family properties in HOPE 2, and from Government-owned or -held single family properties in HOPE 3. HOPE Grants were used for property acquisition, rehabilitation, mortgage subsidies, security measures, and technical assistance. In addition, grants have been devoted to counseling and training of residents, and other activities intended to help them become economically self-sufficient homeowners. No funding is being requested for 2004. This schedule reflects the liquidation of prior year balances.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Secretary to establish a revolving fund into which rental collections in excess of the established basic rents for units in section 236 subsidized projects would be deposited.

The Housing and Community Development Amendment of 1978 authorized the Secretary, subject to approval in appropriation acts, to transfer excess rent collections received after 1978 to the Troubled Projects Operating Subsidy program, renamed the Flexible Subsidy Fund. Prior to that time, collections were used for paying tax and utility increases in section 236 projects. The Housing and Community Development Act of 1980 amended the 1978 Act by authorizing the transfer of excess rent collections regardless of when collected. This Budget proposes that the resources from the Rental Housing Assistance Fund continue to be transferred to the Flexible Subsidy Fund, with the exception of amounts required to make refunds of excess income remittances as authorized by Public Law 106-569.

FLEXIBLE SUBSIDY FUND
(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

From the Rental Housing Assistance Fund, all uncommitted balances of excess rental charges as of September 30, 2003, and any collections made during fiscal year 2004 (with the exception of amounts required to make refunds of excess income remittances as authorized by Public Law 106-569), shall be transferred to the Flexible Subsidy Fund, as authorized by section 236(g) of the National Housing Act, as amended.

Note.—A regular 2003 appropriation for this account had not been enacted at the time the budget was prepared; therefore, this account is operating under a continuing resolution (P.L. 107-229, as amended). The amounts included for 2003 in this budget reflect the Administration's 2003 policy proposals.

The Flexible Subsidy Fund assisted financially troubled subsidized projects under certain FHA authorities. The subsidies were intended to prevent potential losses to the FHA fund resulting from project insolvency and to preserve these projects as a viable source of housing for low and moderate-income tenants. Priority was given to projects with Federal insurance-in-force and then to those with mortgages that had been assigned to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The budget assumes that the account will continue to serve as a repository of excess rental charges appropriated from the Rental Housing Assistance Fund. Since 1996, these resources have not been used for new reservations but they continue to offset Flexible Subsidy outlays and other discretionary expenditures. In 2001, Congress enacted legislation which permits excess income balances in the Rental Housing Assistance Fund or transferred to the Flexible Subsidy Fund to be used for refunds of prior excess income remittances, as permitted by law.

The Homeownership Assistance Fund was established by the Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983. It provided for the receipt of recaptures of budget authority, cash, and interest earnings under the restructured section 235 program. The funds were authorized to be used, to the extent approved in Appropriation Acts, by the Secretary to provide additional section 235 assistance payments for mortgagors who are unable to assume the full payment due under the mortgage after the termination of the original 10-year assistance payments contract.

The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) provides mortgage insurance to encourage lenders to make credit available to expand homeownership and to predominantly serve borrowers that the conventional market does not adequately provide for including: first-time homebuyers; minorities; lower-income families; and, residents of underserved areas (central cities and rural areas).

The Budget proposes an aggregate limitation of $185 billion on commitments to guarantee loans in 2004. The Budget also proposes a new single family loan guarantee product that extends FHA insurance to borrowers who cannot meet existing underwriting standards due to poor credit ratings. Borrowers will still be required to meet debt, income, and repayment ability standards. Increased risk of default associated with these borrowers is offset by requiring greater owner equity and by charging an annual premium of up to one percent rather than the one-half of one percent charged currently. After 24 months of on-time payments, the higher annual premium will be reduced. This new program will insure mortgages on homes currently ineligible under Sec. 203(b) and Sec. 234(c) of the National Housing Act, and will be obligations of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records administrative expenses for this program, as well as the subsidy costs, if any, associated with the loan guarantees committed in 1992 and thereafter. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this non-budgetary account records all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated in 1992 and thereafter (including modifications of direct loans that resulted from obligations in any year). The amounts in this account are a means of financing and are not included in the budget totals.

The $50 million in 2004 direct loan limitation in the MMI Fund would permit the Department to use Purchase Money Mortgages (PMMs) to help finance the sale of acquired single family properties. HUD would extend credit for these single-family homes to community nonprofit organizations or local government entities who would be expected to sell the properties to low- and moderate-income buyers. The use of PMMs provides a tool for State and local nonprofit organizations to use in revitalizing communities, and creates enhanced homeownership opportunities for low- and moderate-income families.

In 2002, a new Capital Reserve account was established for the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund. Financial reserves, including securities, of the MMI Fund were transferred from the liquidating account to the new Capital Reserve account. Starting in 2003, this new account will earn interest on Treasury investments, collect negative subsidy and downward re-estimates from the Financing account, and pay upward reestimates. The Liquidating account will now only reflect cashflows related to pre-1992 books of business.

The Federal Housing Administration Fund currently consists of four separate insurance funds.

In order to present more clearly the operations of the various funds, FHA's budget transactions are separated into two major business segments. The basic single-family insurance programs in the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) fund and the multifamily Cooperative Management Housing Insurance (CMHI) funds form one segment. All other multifamily and other specialized insurance programs in the General Insurance and Special Risk Insurance funds (GI/SRI) form the other segment.

The Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 creates a structure of three accounts for existing credit program. For each of the FHA business segments (MMI/CMHI and GI/SRI) there is a liquidating account, which records the revenues and costs associated with loan insurance committed prior to October 1, 1991, a financing account which records the revenues and costs associated with commitments to insure loans made after September 30, 1991, and, a program account which records the transactions associated with the program subsidy costs, if any, and the costs of administering the program.

This liquidating account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from MMI/CMHI loans insured prior to 1992 and is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and thereafter (including modifications of loans insured in any year) is recorded in the corresponding program (86-0183) and financing (86-4587 and 86-4242) accounts.

In 2002, a new MMI capital reserve account was established to maintain reserves required by statute that were previously deposited in the liquidating account.

The program activity in the "Program Highlights" table shown below reflects only the activity in the MMI/CMHI liquidating and financing accounts. The GI/SRI program activity can be found with the GI/SRI liquidating account (86-4072).

Multifamily Products.—This account includes budget authority for multifamily insurance programs requiring positive credit subsidies, as well as for salaries and expenses and other administrative costs for all General and Special Risk Insurance Fund programs.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for the single family, multifamily, hospital, and Title I insurance programs of FHA's General Insurance and Special Risk Insurance Funds, the subsidy costs associated with the loan guarantees committed or direct loans obligated in 1992 and thereafter (including modifications of loan guarantees or direct loans that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of these programs. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are accounted for on a cash basis.

The Budget includes a reduction in the annual premium rate of multifamily Section 221(d)(4) loan guarantees from 57 basis points to 50 basis points. This reflects improved estimates of these loan guarantee subsidy cost.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this non-budgetary account records all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated in 1992 and thereafter (including loan modifications) for FHA's General Insurance and Special Risk Insurance Fund programs. The amounts in this account are a means of financing and are not included in the budget totals. As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, no administrative expenses can be recorded in the financing account.

This schedule includes two direct loan programs. One provides bridge loan financing to facilitate the disposition of multifamily housing owned by the Department to non-profit organizations who agree to preserve it as affordable rental or cooperative housing. The second is a single-family direct loan program for purchase money mortgages, as discussed in the preceding section for the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund.

The General Insurance fund provides for a large number of specialized mortgage insurance programs, including the insurance of loans for property improvements as well as for cooperatives, condominiums, nursing homes, rental housing and nonprofit hospitals.

The Special Risk Insurance fund provides insurance on behalf of mortgagors who otherwise would not be eligible for mortgage insurance. In addition, the fund provides insurance on mortgages covering experimental housing where strict adherence to State or local building regulations was not observed.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from loan guarantees committed and direct loans obligated prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. New insurance and direct loan activity in 1992 and thereafter in the GI/SRI programs is recorded in corresponding program (86-0200) and financing (86-4077 and 86-4105) accounts.

Section 571 of the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 1998 established the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring within HUD to administer the program of mortgage and rental assistance restructuring. Included in the budget estimates for this account are projections for the financial operations of the office.

Restructuring authorities under the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 expire at the end of fiscal year 2006 except for binding commitments entered into prior to October 1, 2006.

Note.—Amounts for direct loan obligations reflect reservations of section 202 funds. Loan obligations shown under the program and financing schedule reflect loans that have reached the initial closing stage of processing.

The Housing for the Elderly or Handicapped Fund was established pursuant to section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959, as amended. The fund provided direct loans to nonprofit organizations building and managing housing projects for lower income persons who are elderly or disabled.

Projects included an assured range of necessary services for the occupants of such projects. In addition, the section 8 lower income housing assistance payments program has been used in conjunction with the section 202 program. Applications under the two programs have been processed simultaneously.

The data included in these schedules represent direct loan activities funded under the Housing for the Elderly or Handicapped Loan Fund. Further, activities in support of the needs of the elderly and disabled have been carried out under a grant program funded in the 1991 Appropriations Act (P.L. 101-507) and authorized in the National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625).

After April 1, 1992, all projects for which there were administrative reservations converted to the capital advance assistance program.

The program and financing schedule for this account summarizes the Federal government's obligations for this loan program.

Financing.—Repayments and interest income from loans continue to be available to pay for commitments of the fund.

The National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974, as amended by the Manufactured Housing Improvement Act of 2000, authorizes development and enforcement of appropriate standards for the construction, design, and performance of manufactured homes to assure their quality, durability, affordability, and safety. All manufactured homes produced since the standards took effect on June 15, 1976 must comply with Federal construction and safety standards. The States are actively encouraged to participate in the program under compliance plans approved by HUD. New program requirements mandated by the Manufactured Housing Improvement Act of 2000 include procurement of an Administering Organization, formation of a Consensus Committee to recommend revisions to and interpretations of the manufactured housing standards, development and implementation of standards for installation of manufactured housing, and development and implementation of a dispute resolution program.

Fees are charged to the manufacturers for each manufactured home transportable section produced and will be used to fund the costs of all authorized activities necessary for the consensus committee, HUD, and its agents to carry out all aspects of the manufactured housing legislation. Fees are deposited in a trust fund administered by the Department, and a portion of the fee receipts are transferred to the salaries and expenses account to defray the direct administrative expenses of the program. In 2002, 323,727 transportable sections were produced, for a total of 180,451 manufactured homes.

The Manufactured Housing Improvement Act of 2000 created a Manufactured Housing Fees Trust Fund and made spending subject to appropriations. This account provides spending for activities formerly funded under Manufactured Home Inspection and Monitoring.

This account also presents activities formerly shown under the Interstate Land Sales account.

The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act provides protection to the public with respect to purchases or leases of subdivision lots. Statements of record must be filed with the Secretary before subdivisions with 100 or more lots may be sold in interstate commerce, except when the subdivision is eligible for exemption.

The Secretary is authorized to charge a fee, to be paid by the developer when filing a statement of record. The fee receipts are permanently appropriated and have helped finance a portion of the direct administrative expenses incurred in program operations.

An estimated 600 filings in 2004 will result in $350,000 in fees.

GOVERNMENT NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

Federal Funds

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Government National Mortgage Association (Ginnie Mae) to guarantee the timely payment of principal and interest on privately issued securities that are backed by pools of FHA, Veterans Affairs (VA) and Rural Housing Service mortgages. The Ginnie Mae guarantee gives lenders access to the capital markets for funds to originate new loans. New FHA and VA loans are currently pooled into Ginnie Mae securities.

Financing.—Ginnie Mae issuers are assessed commitment, guarantee and other fees to cover costs incurred by Ginnie Mae and to fund a reserve against possible future payments under the guarantee.

Operating results.—Fee collections, interest, and other income are expected to exceed expenses by $691 million in 2003 and $780 million in 2004.

testing, and demonstrations related to the HUD mission. These functions are carried out internally and through contracts with industry, nonprofit research organizations, and educational institutions, and through agreements with State and local governments and other Federal agencies.

In 2004, the research program will expand funding for program evaluations and cover some of the increased costs associated with analyzing newly available 2000 census data to determine their implications for HUD programs. National Housing Surveys will continue in 2004. Research and evaluation activities will also support the Department in carrying out its responsibilities under the Government Performance and Results Act.

The Budget proposes an appropriation of $50 million in 2004 to fund fair housing activities that support efforts to end housing discrimination. Of the amount requested, $30 million is for the Fair Housing Assistance Program and $20 million is for the Fair Housing Initiatives Program.

The Fair Housing Assistance Program (FHAP), authorized by title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968 as amended, provides funding to State and local agencies to assure prompt and effective processing of Title VIII (Civil Rights Act of 1968) complaints.

The funding requested for FHAP will support fair housing enforcement by increasing funding to support additional State and local fair housing organizations to meet the needs of currently underserved populations. It will also address the persistent high rate of discrimination against minorities as identified by the 2000 Housing Discrimination Study. It is estimated that the number of new State and local agencies with laws equivalent to the Fair Housing Act will increase to 99 in 2004 from 98 in 2003.

The Fair Housing Initiatives Program (FHIP), authorized by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987, as amended by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992, provides support to public and private organizations for the purpose of eliminating or preventing discrimination in housing and for enhancing fair housing opportunities. FHIP provides funding for projects that inform and educate the public, including housing providers, on the rights and obligations of the Fair Housing Act and about substantially equivalent state and local fair housing laws.

Title X of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-550), known as the Residential Lead-Based Paint Hazard Reduction Act, authorized the Secretary to establish the Lead-Based Paint Hazard Control Grant Program. The primary purpose of the program is to reduce the exposure of young children to lead-based paint hazards in their homes.

The program is a major part of a 10-year strategy to eliminate lead poisoning in children. The 2004 Budget includes a $10 million increase to $116 million for HUD's Lead Hazard Control Program competitive grants and operation LEAP. Technical studies, technical assistance and the Healthy Homes Initiative are both funded at $10 million. Operation LEAP funds will be used to leverage other private and public sector resources for the lead hazard control program.

The Lead Hazard Control Grant Program provides grants of $1 to $2.5 million to State and local governments and Indian tribes for control of lead-based paint hazards in privately owned, low-income owner-occupied and rental housing. The grants are also designed to stimulate the development of a housing maintenance and rehabilitation workforce trained in lead-safe work practices and a certified hazard evaluation and control industry. In awarding grants, HUD promotes the use of new, low cost approaches to hazard control that can be replicated across the nation.

The Healthy Homes Initiative will enable the Department to control additional childhood diseases and injuries that are caused by housing related factors. The initiative will allow for a demonstration that evaluates the methods of controlling two or more housing related diseases through a single intervention. A public education/outreach effort, to enable the public to act effectively to protect their children, will also be conducted.

The Office of Healthy Homes and Lead Hazard Control will continue its Technical Support program, which will include public education; technical assistance for State and local agencies, private property owners, HUD programs and field offices and professional organizations; quality control to ensure that the evaluation and control of lead-based paint hazards is done properly in HUD-assisted housing; development of standards, technical guidance, regulations and improved testing; and hazard control methods.

This appropriation funds the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (the Office), which was established in 1992 to regulate the financial safety and soundness of two housing Government Sponsored Enterprises (GSEs)—Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. The Office was authorized in the Federal Housing Enterprise Safety and Soundness Act of 1992, which also instituted a risk-based capital standard for the GSEs, and gave the regulator enhanced authority to enforce those standards. The office is also required by statute to conduct on-site annual examinations at the GSEs to determine the condition of each enterprise for the purpose of ensuring their financial safety and soundness.

In order to treat OFHEO similarly to other financial regulators, including the regulator of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, the Budget proposes legislation that would provide direct funding of OFHEO's activities with mandatory assessments on Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

The Working Capital Fund, authorized by the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965, finances information technology and office automation initiatives which can be performed more efficiently on a centralized basis. In 2001 and 2002 the fund was financed from fees charged for services performed. In 2003 and 2004, a direct appropriation is requested for the operations of the computer system and for development and modifications of Department-wide systems. Fees will continue for services to develop and modify systems where the benefit is limited to a specific program.

“(A) that the number of public housing units converted under this subsection shall be equal to the number of units receiving project-based voucher assistance under this subsection, and that a commitment has first been obtained from an approved lender for a mortgage loan secured by the property to finance qualified, necessary acquisition or capital improvements under terms established by the Secretary; and

“(B) that the Secretary shall not approve the conversion of any public housing project or portion of a project that is owned by a public housing agency that is not in compliance with the provisions of subsection (j) at such time as the Secretary is asked to consider such approval.

(2) FUNDING OF VOUCHERS.—The initial year of any contract for project-based voucher assistance under this subsection may be funded with amounts made available in an appropriations Act under the headings making amounts available for the purposes set forth in subsections (d) or (e) of this section. Any renewal of such contracts shall be funded with appropriated amounts available for the renewal of assistance under section 8.

“(F) where units converted to project-based voucher assistance under this subsection are owned by the public housing agency (including an entity controlled by such agency), the Secretary may administer or make alternative arrangements to administer the obligations otherwise required of the public housing agency under the annual contributions contract; and “(G) the Secretary may waive, or specify alternative requirements for, applicable provisions of this Act where the Secretary determines that such waiver or requirements would facilitate a successful transition from public housing to project-based voucher assistance.

“(4) TREATMENT OF CONVERSION.—The conversion of public housing units to project-based voucher assistance under this subsection, including any disposition of public housing units to an entity controlled by the public housing agency prior to but in furtherance of such conversion, shall not be considered a disposition under section 18 of this Act.

“(C) SECURITY.—As a condition for issuing guarantees under this subsection, the Secretary shall require the entity to furnish, at the discretion of the Secretary, such security as may be deemed appropriate by the Secretary in making such guarantees. In addition, in connection with any loan, note, or other obligation guaranteed pursuant to this subsection, the Secretary may require the payment of a premium charge, which premium charge shall be retained and used by the Secretary to offset the risk to the government associated with such guarantee.

“The Secretary is authorized to accept assignment of any loan, note or other obligation guaranteed under this subsection and to exercise all the rights of a holder of such debt instrument, including the right to sell such loan, note, or other obligation, and to take such action and advance such sums as may be necessary to preserve or protect the lien of such loan, note or other obligation.

Wildland fire preparedness.—This activity funds the non-emergency and predictable aspects of the Department's wildland fire program. Preparedness includes readiness, operational planning, oversight, procurement, training, supervision, and deployment of wildland fire suppression personnel and equipment prior to wildland fire occurrence. It also includes activities related to program monitoring and evaluation, integration of fire into land-use planning, fire facility construction and maintenance, and fire research and fire science program activities.

Fire suppression operations.—This activity funds the emergency and unpredictable aspects of the Department's wildland fire management program. Suppression operations include the total spectrum of management actions taken on wildland fires in a safe, cost-effective manner, considering public benefits and values to be protected and consistent with resource objectives and land management plans. Suppression operations also include severity funding used to improve initial attack preparedness response capabilities when abnormal fire conditions occur resulting in fire seasons starting earlier than normal, lasting longer than normal, or exceeding average fire danger ratings for prolonged periods. Funding requests are guided by the historical 10-year average of suppression expenditures, adjusted for inflation.

Other operations.—Other wildland fire operations include emergency rehabilitation, hazardous fuels reduction, and rural fire assistance. Emergency rehabilitation of wildland fire areas is carried out to prevent land degradation and resource damages and to stabilize soils, structures, or other conditions or damage caused by wildland fires. Hazardous fuels reduction operations include all operational aspects of applying prescribed fire to reduce fuel loadings and promote ecosystem diversity. It also includes mechanical fuels reduction treatments. Rural fire assistance provides for financial support to local and rural fire protection districts that protect small communities. These local firefighting agencies often provide a critical service in helping meet protection needs for wildland urban interface areas threatened by wildfire. Funding would be used for engines and other initial attack equipment, communication equipment, training and other related support.

The Central Hazardous Materials Fund is used to fund remedial investigations/feasibility studies and cleanups of hazardous waste sites for which the Department of the Interior is liable. Authority is provided for amounts recovered from responsible parties to be credited to this account. Thus, the account may be composed of both annual appropriations of no-year funds and of offsetting collections. The Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act, as amended (42 U.S.C. Section 9601 et seq.) requires responsible parties, including Federal landowners, to investigate and clean up releases of hazardous substances.

Permanent operating funds accounts include:

Operations and maintenance of quarters.—Funds in this account are used to maintain and repair BLM employee-occupied quarters from which rental charges are collected. Agencies are required to collect quarters rentals from employees who occupy Government-owned housing and quarters. This housing is provided only in isolated areas or where an employee is required to live on-site at a Federally owned facility or reservation.

Forest ecosystems health and recovery.—Funds in this account are derived from revenue generated from the Federal share of receipts from the sale of salvage timber from the Oregon and California grant lands, public domain lands, and Coos Bay Wagon Road lands. This account was established to allow the Bureau of Land Management to more efficiently and effectively address forest health issues. Funds can be used for other forest health purposes, including release from competing vegetation and density control treatments.

Timber sale pipeline restoration fund.—This fund provides for the deposit and use of fees collected by the BLM for sales of non-salvage timber pursuant to the timber salvage provisions of Public Law 104-19 and Public Law 105-83. Of the total deposited into this account, 75 percent is to be used for preparation of timber sales to fill the timber pipeline on lands administered by the BLM, and 25 percent is to be expended on the backlog of recreation projects on BLM lands.

Recreation fees.—This account holds funds that enable the BLM to retain and spend up to 15 percent of recreation receipts collected during the current year to offset fee collection costs.

Expenses, road maintenance deposits.—Users of certain roads under BLM's jurisdiction make deposits for maintenance purposes. Moneys collected are appropriated for necessary road maintenance. Moneys collected on Oregon and California grant lands are available only for those lands (43 U.S.C. 1762(c), 43 U.S.C. 1735(b)).

Recreational fee demonstration program.—Fees collected by the BLM at recreation sites identified pursuant to provisions of the 2002 Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act are deposited to this account. The temporary authority for this program expires at the end of fiscal year 2004. To ensure that fee revenue remains available for BLM sites after 2004, the Administration will propose legislation providing permanent fee authority. BLM returns 100 percent of these receipts back to the site where the fees were generated.

Acquisitions in Deschutes, OR from land sale receipts.—Pursuant to Public Law 105-221, the Oregon Public Lands Transfer Act, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to use the proceeds from sales in Deschutes County to purchase environmentally sensitive lands.

Operations and acquisitions in Nevada from land sale receipts.—Pursuant to Public Law 105-263, 85% of receipts from sales of public domain lands in southern Nevada are used to acquire environmentally sensitive land in the State, and to make capital improvements to areas administered by the NPS, FWS, and BLM in Clark County, NV. Included in this account are earnings on investments.

Lincoln County land sales.—Public Law 106-298 authorizes the Secretary to dispose of certain lands in Lincoln County, Nevada, and distribute the proceeds as follows: five percent to the state of Nevada, 10 percent to the County, and 85 percent to an interest bearing account that is available for expenditure without further appropriation.

Commercial film and photography fees.—Fees collected pursuant to Public Law 106-206 are used to recover costs incurred as a result of filming activities or similar projects, including, but not limited to, administrative and personnel costs. Also, a reasonable fee is collected for commercial filming activities or similar projects on Federal lands administered by the Secretary of the Interior.

Federal land disposal.—The Federal Land Disposal Account, P.L. 106-248 Stat. 616, provides that the Administration will conduct sales of lands that have been classified as suitable for disposal under current resource management plans. This law provides that receipts from such sales may be used to acquire non-Federal lands with significant resource values that fall within the boundaries of areas now managed by the Department of the Interior.

The Budget proposes that the Federal Land Transaction Facilitation Act (Title II of P.L. 106-248) be modified to provide BLM with more flexibility regarding federal lands to be disposed of and the use of receipts generated by these land sales. Specifically, this proposal will: (1) allow BLM to use updated management plans to identify areas suitable for disposal, (2) allow a portion of the receipts to be used for BLM restoration projects, and (3) cap receipt retention at $100 million per year.

Payments to Nevada from receipts on land sales.—(A) Public Law 96–586 authorizes and directs the Secretary to sell not more than 700 acres of public lands per calendar year in and around Las Vegas, Nevada, the proceeds of which are to be used to acquire environmentally sensitive lands in the Lake Tahoe Basin of California and Nevada. Annual revenues are distributed to the State of Nevada (five percent) and the county in which the land is located (10 percent). (B) Public Law 105–263 authorizes the disposal through sale of approximately 27,000 acres in Clark County Nevada, the proceeds of which are to be distributed as follows: (a) five percent for use in the general education program of the State of Nevada (b) 10 percent for use by the Southern Nevada Water Authority for water treatment and transmission facility infrastructure in Clark County, Nevada and (c) the remaining 85 percent to be used to acquire environmentally sensitive lands in Nevada; capital improvements to areas administered by NPS, FWS and BLM in Clark County, Nevada; development of a multi-species habitat plan in Clark County, Nevada; development of parks, trails and natural areas in Clark County, Nevada; and reimbursements of BLM for costs incurred arranging sales and exchanges under the Act. The Helium Act Amendments of 1960, Public Law 86-777 (50 U.S.C. 167), authorized activities necessary to provide sufficient helium to meet the current and foreseeable future needs of essential government activities.

The Helium Privatization Act of 1996, Public Law 104-273, provides for the eventual privatization of the program and its functions. In FY 2004, the Helium program will consist of:

- continued storage and transmission of crude helium;
- complete disposal of helium refining facilities and other excess property not needed for storage and transmission of crude helium;
- oversight of the production of helium on Federal lands;
- administration of in kind crude helium gas sale program.

The estimates assume that the helium program will continue to fund full implementation of the Helium Privatization Act.

The Minerals Management Service supervises exploration for, and the development and production of, gas, oil, and other minerals on the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) lands; and collects royalties, rentals, and bonuses due the Federal Government and Indian lessors from minerals produced on Federal, Indian, and OCS lands.

Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) lands.—The program provides for: (1) performance of environmental assessments to ensure compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA); (2) conduct of lease offerings; (3) selection and evaluation of tracts offered for lease by competitive bidding; (4) assurance that the Federal Government receives fair market value for leased lands; and (5) regulation and supervision of energy and mineral exploration, development, and production operations on the OCS lands.

Minerals revenue management.—The minerals revenue management program provides accounting, auditing, and compliance activities for royalties, rentals, and bonuses due from minerals produced on Federal, Indian, allotted and OCS lands. The program includes an automated accounting system to ensure that all royalties are properly collected.

General administration.—General administrative expenses provide for management, executive direction and coordination, administrative support, Federal building space and general support services.

As of May 23, 1908 (16 U.S.C. 499), twenty-five percent of the revenues collected from onshore mineral leasing and production on national-forest lands have been paid to the state in which the national forest resides. A state's payment is based on national forest acreage and where a national forest is situated in several states, an individual state payment is proportionate to its area within that particular national forest.

The Government Management Reform Act, P.L. 103-356, established the Franchise Fund Pilot Program. Pursuant to the Act, the Department of the Interior was designated as one of six executive branch agencies authorized to establish a franchise fund. Section 113 of the General Provisions of the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1997, P.L. 104-208, established in the Treasury a franchise fund pilot. This fund finances computer services and other administrative support services on a fully competitive and cost reimbursable basis to Federal customers. The budget extends through the end of fiscal year 2004 the authority for the franchise fund pilot program.

Environmental protection.—This activity funds those functions that directly contribute to ensuring that the environment is protected during surface coal mining operations. It also addresses those activities that ensure that coal operators adequately reclaim the land after mining is completed.

Under this activity, OSM provides regulatory grants to States to operate enforcement programs under the terms of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977

(SMCRA). It also provides for the operation of Federal and Indian land programs and the oversight of State programs. This activity also supports State regulatory program development and maintenance.

Environmental restoration.—This activity funds environmental reclamation efforts through the collection of civil penalties for post-SMCRA reclamation and funds from bond forfeitures. It also provides funding for underground and coal outcrop fires.

Technology development and transfer.—This activity provides funding to enhance the technical skills that States and Indian Tribes need to operate their regulatory programs. It provides technical outreach to States and Indian Tribes to solve problems related to the environmental effects of coal mining. The Applicant Violator System is funded from this activity.

Financial management.—This activity provides the resources for the managing, accounting, and processing of collections and for the pursuit of delinquent civil penalties. This includes developing and maintaining information management systems that support these functions and enhance the agency's ability to deny new mining permits to applicants with unabated State or Federal violations.

Executive direction and administration.—This activity provides funding for executive direction, general administrative support, and the acquisition of certain agency-wide common services, such as rent, telephones, and postage.

ABANDONED MINE RECLAMATION FUND

For necessary expenses to carry out title IV of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, Public Law 95-87, as amended, including the purchase of not more than 10 passenger motor vehicles for replacement only, $174,469,000 to be derived from receipts of the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund and to remain available until expended; of which up to $10,000,000, to be derived from the Federal Expenses Share of the Fund, shall be for supplemental grants to States for the reclamation of abandoned sites with acid mine rock drainage from coal mines, and for associated activities, through the Appalachian Clean Streams Initiative: Provided, That grants to minimum program States will be $1,500,000 per State in fiscal year 2004: Provided further, That prior year unobligated funds appropriated for the emergency reclamation program shall not be subject to the 25 percent limitation per State and may be used without fiscal year limitation for emergency projects: Provided further, That pursuant to Public Law 97-365, the Department of the Interior is authorized to use up to 20 percent from the recovery of the delinquent debt owed to the United States Government to pay for contracts to collect these debts: Provided further, That funds made available under title IV of Public Law 95-87 may be used for any required non-Federal share of the cost of projects funded by the Federal Government for the purpose of environmental restoration related to treatment or abatement of acid mine drainage from abandoned mines: Provided further, That such projects must be consistent with the purposes and priorities of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act: Provided further, That the State of Maryland may set aside the greater of $1,000,000 or 10 percent of the total of the grants made available to the State under such title IV, if the amount set aside is deposited in an acid mine drainage abatement and treatment fund established under a State law, pursuant to which law the amount (together with all interest earned on the amount) is expended by the State to undertake acid mine drainage abatement and treatment projects, except that before any amounts greater than 10 percent of its title IV grants are deposited in an acid mine drainage abatement and treatment fund, the State of Maryland must first complete all Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act priority one projects.

Note.—A regular 2003 appropriation for this account had not been enacted at the time the budget was prepared; therefore, this account is operating under a continuing resolution (P.L. 107-229, as amended). Environmental Restoration.—This activity funds those functions that contribute to reclaiming lands affected by past coal mining practices. Funds are used to restore land and water resources and the environment that have been degraded by mining prior to the passage of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act (SMCRA).

This activity provides reclamation grants to qualified States. It also provides for the Federal reclamation program, which includes the Federally-administered emergency reclamation program, and for high priority projects in States that do not have a reclamation program.

Funding is also provided within this account, for the Appalachian Clean Streams Initiative.

Technology development and transfer.—This activity provides funding to enhance the technical skills that the States and Indian Tribes need to operate their reclamation programs. OSM conducts technical studies on mining and reclamation-related problems. This activity also provides resources for the Small operators assistance program.

Financial Management.—This activity provides funds to identify, notify, collect, and audit fees from coal operators for the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund. OSM seeks to maximize voluntary compliance with the SMCRA's reclamation fee provisions.

Executive direction and administration.—This activity provides funding for executive direction, general administrative support, and the acquisition of certain agency-wide common services such as rent, telephones, and postage.

The following are the key performance measures for the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund account:

PERFORMANCE MEASURES

	2001 actual	2002 est.	2003 est.
Number of acres reclaimed on all abandoned coal mine sites.	8,600	8,200	6,900

The 2001 accomplishment for acres reclaimed is a calculated estimate. The accomplishments reported to OSM by States and Tribes for 2001 (13,808 acres) included more than one year. Also, estimates generally reflect the full number of projects funded; actual project completion may occur one to three years after initiation.

The water and related resources account supports the development, management, and restoration of water and related natural resources in the 17 Western States. The account includes funds for operating and maintaining existing facilities to obtain the greatest overall level of benefits, to protect public safety, and to conduct studies on ways to improve the use of water and related natural resources. Work will be done in partnership and cooperation with non-Federal entities and other Federal agencies. In FY 2004, Reclamation will implement 4 initiatives, totaling $11 million, that are directed at enhancing the Bureau of Reclamation's efficiency and performance in water and power delivery. The initiatives will: develop pilot projects that can demonstrate how to prevent crisis-level water conflicts in the West; expand the use of science to find a way to reduce the cost of water desalination and waste disposal; design water management programs that address environmental needs on a basin-wide scale; and enhance Reclamation managers' understanding of the purpose, process, and requirements of the Endangered Species Act, as it relates to federal actions.

Under the Small Reclamation Projects Act, loans and grants can be made to non-Federal organizations for construction of small water resource projects.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, the loan program account records the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond, as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

No funds are requested for the Bureau of Reclamation Loan Program for direct loans. Funding is included for Loan Program Administration for fiscal year 2004.

The U.S. Geological Survey provides research and scientific information to support the mission of the Department of the Interior and the science needs of the land and resource management bureaus of the Department. The U.S. Geological Survey also works in collaboration with other Federal, State, and Tribal cooperators to conduct research and provide scientific data and information concerning natural hazards and environmental issues and pertaining to the water, land, and mineral and biological resources of the Nation.

The budget for the U.S. Geological Survey continues to emphasize mission responsibilities to provide sound and impartial science in support of the land and resource management bureaus of the Department of the Interior and its thousands of other partners and customers. This budget focuses resources on those programs that apply integrated science to support natural resource management and more directly address the science needs of Interior Bureaus.

The budget for USGS includes $4 million for the Everglades restoration-related Cooperative Ecosystem Science Initiative (CESI), which USGS has previously received for reimbursable work conducted on behalf of the National Park Service. With the direct funding, USGS will continue to support interagency research, planning, monitoring, and assessment activities in support of Everglades restoration.

Mapping, remote sensing, and geographic investigations program.—The mapping, remote sensing, and geographic investigations program is currently transitioning from primarily data collection and dissemination towards focusing on improving geospatial data access, integration, and applications to support development of the National Spatial Data Infrastructure (NSDI). The USGS is the lead Federal agency for civil mapping. Research is conducted in the mapping sciences, geography, and related disciplines in support of data integration and applications. Activities related to the NSDI support interagency and intergovernmental partnerships for establishing a national geospatial data clearinghouse, developing data standards, coordinating regional data production and sharing, and developing a data framework (data set) for the Nation.

Geologic hazards, resources, and processes.—The national program of onshore and offshore geologic research and investigations produces: (1) information on natural hazards of geologic origin such as earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, landslides, and coastal erosion; (2) geologic information for use in the management of public lands and in national policy determinations; (3) information on the chemistry and physics of the Earth, its past climate, and the geologic processes by which it was formed and is being modified; (4) geologic, geophysical, and geochemical maps and analyses to address environmental, energy and mineral resource, and hazards concerns; (5) hazards, energy and mineral resource, and environmental assessments; and (6) improved methods and instrumentation for detecting and monitoring hazards, disseminating hazards information, and conducting assessments.

Water resources investigations.—The USGS water programs produce data, analyses, assessments and methodologies to support Federal, State, Tribal, and local government decisions on water planning, water management, water quality, flood forecasting and warning, and enhancement of the quality of the environment. The U.S. Geological Survey's water resources programs have a rich history of working cooperatively with other Federal agencies, States, and other entities to leverage Federal resources to meet their mutual water information needs.

Biological research.—The national program of biological research: (1) conducts biological resources inventory and monitoring; (2) provides scientific information for the management of biological resources; and (3) predicts the consequences of environmental change and the effects of alternative management actions on plants, animals, and their habitats. The program conducts the high priority biological research needed by the Department of the Interior's land management bureaus and operates the Cooperative Research Unit program which provides research and information to resource managers, and trains natural resource professionals in partnership with university and State scientists.

Science support.—Science support provides for Bureauwide management; executive direction and coordination; administrative, human resources, and information resources management services, and financial and personnel systems support provided by DOI's National Business Center.

Facilities.—This activity finances: (1) USGS rental payments; (2) operation and maintenance for properties; and (3) deferred maintenance and capital improvement.

Reimbursable program.—Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States, Tribes, and municipalities for: cooperative efforts and proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records; proceeds from sale of personal property; reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission; and reimbursements from foreign countries and international organizations for technical assistance. Reimbursements from other Federal agencies are for mission related work performed at the request of the financing agency.

Ecological services.—The Service conserves, protects, and enhances fish, wildlife, plants, and their habitat by working with private landowners, states, and other federal agencies. These partnership activities help make the listing of species under the Endangered Species Act unnecessary and protect and recover those species that are listed. Financial assistance is provided to private landowners to restore or improve habitat for endangered species. Technical assistance helps prevent or minimize adverse environmental effects of development projects. Contaminants are investigated, monitored, and assessed for effects on trust resources.

National Wildlife Refuge System.—The Service maintains the National Wildlife Refuge System consisting of 540 units, with waterfowl production areas in 201 counties and 50 co-ordination areas, totaling about 95 million acres. A total of $109 million is proposed for refuge maintenance as part of the Service's effort to address a backlog in deferred maintenance projects.

Migratory Bird Management and Law Enforcement.—The Service directs and coordinates national migratory bird programs to protect and enhance populations and habitat of more than 800 species of birds. Grants and partnerships are key to these programs, such as Joint Ventures implementing the North American Waterfowl Management Plan. The Service Law Enforcement program investigates wildlife crimes, regulates wildlife trade, helps Americans understand and obey wildlife protections laws, and works in partnership with international, state, and tribal counterparts to conserve wildlife resources. In 2004, the Service will add 9 new wildlife inspectors to the current force of 95 to inspect wildlife shipments entering or leaving United States ports-of-entry.

Fisheries.—The Fisheries Program consists of 69 national hatcheries, 9 Fish Health Centers, 7 Fish Technology Centers, 64 Fishery Resource Offices, and a Historic National Fish Hatchery. Working with partners, the Fisheries Program recovers, restores and maintains fish and other aquatic resources at self-sustaining levels; provides technical assistance to States, Tribes and others; and supports Federal mitigation programs for the benefit of the American Public.

General operations.—Provides policy guidance, program coordination, and administrative services to all fish and wildlife programs. The funds also support the Service's international activities, the National Conservation Training Center, and projects through the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation to restore and enhance fish and wildlife populations.

Funding for refuge, hatchery and law enforcement maintenance emphasizes the Service's commitment to the long-term stewardship of federal lands and facilities.

This account includes $62 million for Federal Infrastructure Improvement and $70 million for the Cooperative Conservation initiative which are part of the Conservation Spending Category.

As part of the 1999 Pacific Salmon Treaty Agreement between the U.S. and Canada, the U.S. agreed to reduce the harvest of Fraser River salmon by the non-Indian fishing fleet. Pursuant to this agreement, the Congress provided the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service with $5.0 million in 2000 under this account. The funds were appropriated for a grant to the State of Washington to (1) meet the intent of the Pacific Salmon Treaty; (2) reduce the overall fleet capacity while maintaining a sustainable and economically viable fishery; and (3) provide economic relief to Washington salmon fishers.

Funds deposited into this account include direct appropriations and fines, penalties, and forfeitures collected under the authority of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (16 U.S.C. 707) and interest on obligations held in the Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Fund. The North American Wetlands Conservation Fund supports wetlands conservation projects approved by the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission. A portion of receipts to the Sport Fish Restoration Account is also available for coastal wetlands conservation projects.

These projects help fulfill the habitat protection, restoration and enhancement goals of the North American Waterfowl Management Plan and the Tripartite Agreement among Mexico, Canada and the United States. These projects may involve partnerships with public agencies and private entities, with non-Federal matching contributions, for the long-term conservation of habitat for migratory birds and other fish and wildlife, including species that are listed, or are candidates to be listed, under the Endangered Species Act (16 U.S.C. 1531).

Wetlands conservation projects include the obtaining of a real property interest in lands or waters, including water rights; the restoration, management or enhancement of habitat; and training and development for conservation management in Mexico. Funding may be provided for assistance for wetlands conservation projects in Canada or Mexico.

The Cooperative Endangered Species Conservation Fund provides grants to States and U.S. territories for conservation, recovery, and monitoring projects for species that are listed, or species that are candidates for listing, as threatened or endangered. Grants are also awarded to States for land acquisition in support of Habitat Conservation Plans and species recovery efforts in partnership with local governments and other interested parties to protect species while allowing development to continue. The Fund is partially financed by permanent appropriations from the General Fund of the U.S. Treasury in an amount equal to five percent of receipts deposited to the Federal aid in wildlife and sport fish restoration accounts and amounts equal to Lacey Act receipts over $500,000. The actual amount available for grants is subject to annual appropriations.

The Refuge Revenue Sharing Act (16 U.S.C. 715s) authorizes revenues through the sale of products from Service lands, less expenses for producing revenue and activities related to revenue sharing. The Fish and Wildlife Service makes payments to counties in which Service lands are located. If the net revenues are insufficient to make full payments according to the formula contained in the Act, direct appropriations are authorized to make up the difference.

In 1997, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service initiated the recreational fee demonstration program at selected refuges and other public sites. Entrance fees and other user receipts collected at sites are deposited into the Recreational fee demonstration program account.

The fee program demonstrates the feasibility of user-generated cost recovery for the operation and maintenance of recreation areas or sites and habitat enhancement projects on Federal lands. Fees are used primarily at the site to improve visitor access, enhance public safety and security, address backlogged maintenance needs, and meet other operational needs. The temporary authority for this program expires at the end of fiscal year 2004. To ensure that fee revenue remains available for refuge improvements after 2004, the Administration will propose legislation providing permanent fee authority.

The Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act, popularly known as the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration Act, created a program to fund the selection, restoration, rehabilitation and improvement of wildlife habitat, and wildlife management research. Under the program, States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands are allocated funds from the 11 percent excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition, the 10 percent excise tax on handguns, and the 12.4 percent tax on certain archery equipment. States are reimbursed up to 75 percent of the cost of approved wildlife and hunter education projects.

The Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Programs Improvement Act of 2000 (P.L. 106-408) amends the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration Act and authorizes a multi-State conservation grant program and a firearm and bow hunter education and safety program which provides grants to the States.

The Federal Aid in Sport Fish Restoration Act, commonly referred to as the Dingell-Johnson Sport Fish Restoration Act (as modified by the Wallop-Breaux amendment) created a fishery resources, conservation, and restoration program funded by an excise tax on fishing and sporting equipment.

Since 1992 the Sport Fish Restoration Fund has supported coastal wetlands grants pursuant to the Coastal Wetlands Planning, Protection and Restoration Act (P.L. 101-646). Additional revenue from small engine fuel taxes was provided under the Surface Transportation Extension Act of 1997.

The Coastal Wetlands Planning, Protection and Restoration Act requires an amount equal to 18 percent of the total deposits into the Sport Fish Restoration Fund, or amounts collected in small engine fuels excise taxes as provided by 26 U.S.C. 9504(b), whichever is greater, to be distributed as follows: 70 percent shall be available to the Corps of Engineers for priority project and conservation planning activities; 15 percent shall be available to the Fish and Wildlife Service for coastal wetlands conservation grants; and 15 percent to the Fish and Wildlife Service for wetlands conservation projects under Section 8 of the North American Wetlands Conservation Act (P.L. 101-233).

The Clean Vessel Act authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to make grants to States, in specified amounts, to carry out projects for the construction, renovation, operation, and maintenance of pumpout stations and waste reception facilities. The Sport Fish Restoration Act, as amended, provides for the transfer of funds from the Sport fish restoration account of the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund for use by the Secretary of the Interior to carry out the purposes of this Act and for use by the Secretary of Transportation for State recreational boating safety programs (46 USC 13106(a)(1)). The Sportfishing and Boating Safety Act authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to develop national and state outreach plans to promote safe fishing and boating opportunities and the conservation of aquatic resources, as well as to make grants to states for developing and maintaining facilities for certain recreational vessels.

Assistance is provided to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the District of Columbia for up to 75 percent of the cost of approved projects including: research into fisheries problems, surveys and inventories of fish populations, and acquisition and improvement of fish habitat and provision of access for public use.

The Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Programs Improvement Act of 2000 (P.L. 106-408) amends the Dingell-Johnson Sport Fish Restoration Act and authorizes a multi-State conservation grant program and provide funding for several fisheries commissions and the Sport Fishing and Boating Partnership Council.

The National Park System contains 387 areas and 84.5 million acres of land in 49 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, Samoa, and the Northern Marianas. These areas have been established to protect and preserve the cultural and natural heritage of the United States and its territories. Park visits total over 280 million annually. This annual appropriation funds the operation of individual units of the National Park System as well as planning and administrative support for the entire system. Within this appropriation, repair and rehabilitation funds are available for two years, to provide the flexibility needed to carry out this project program, in which typical projects include, but are not limited to, facility, campground, and trail rehabilitation; roadway overlay and/or reconditioning; bridge repair; wastewater and water line replacement; and the rewiring of buildings. The repair and rehabilitation program includes funding for development and implementation of the automated facility management software system and to conduct comprehensive facility condition assessments.

Recreational fee demonstration program.—The National Park Service and other land management agencies have initiated a demonstration fee program that allows parks and other units to collect new or increased admission and user fees and spend the revenue for park improvements. This temporary authority, provided in section 315 of section 101(c) of Public Law 104-134 as amended or supplemented by section 319 of section 101(d) of Public Law 104-208, section 5001 of Public Law 105-18, sections 107, 320 and 321 of Public Law 105-83, section 327 of section 101(e) of Public Law 105-277, section 336 of Public Law 106-291 and section 312 of Public Law 107-63 expires at the end of fiscal year 2004. To ensure that fee revenue remains available for park improvements after 2004, the Administration will propose legislation providing permanent fee authority.

Non-demonstration parks fee program.—Under section 310 of Public Law 106-176, the National Park Service may retain recreation fees collected at NPS sites that are not part of the Recreational Fee Demonstration program or that fall within the deed-restricted parks fee program. Revenues are used in the same manner and for the same purposes as provided under the fee demonstration program, and this authority expires upon the termination of that program. No fee-collecting parks (except deed-restricted) are expected to remain outside of the Recreational Fee Demonstration Program as a result of legislation removing limits on the number of parks in the Program.

National park passport program.—Proceeds from the sale of national park passports for admission to all park units are to be used for the national passport program and the National Park System in accordance with section 603 of Public Law 105-391. By law, up to 15 percent of proceeds may be used to administer and promote the national park passport program and the National Park System, and net proceeds are to be used for high priority visitor service or resource management projects throughout the National Park System.

Deed-restricted parks fee program.—Park units where admission fees may not be collected by reason of deed restrictions retain any other recreation fees collected and use them for certain park operation purposes in accordance with Public Law 105-327. This law applies to Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Lincoln Home National Historic Site and Abraham Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site.

Transportation systems fund.—Fees charged for public use of transportation services at parks are retained and used by each collecting park for costs associated with the transportation systems in accordance with section 501 of Public Law 105-391.

Educational expenses, children of employees, Yellowstone National Park.—Revenues received from the collection of short-term recreation fees to the park are used to provide education facilities to pupils who are dependents of persons engaged in the administration, operation, and maintenance of Yellowstone National Park (16 U.S.C. 40a).

Payment for tax losses on land acquired for Grand Teton National Park.—Revenues received from fees collected from visitors are used to compensate the State of Wyoming for tax losses on Grand Teton National Park lands (16 U.S.C. 406d-3).

Park concessions franchise fees.—Franchise fees for concessioner activities in the National Park System are deposited in this account and used for certain park operations activities in accordance with section 407 of Public Law 105-391. By law, 20 percent of franchise fees collected are used to support activities throughout the National Park System generally and 80 percent are retained and used by each collecting park unit for visitor services and for purposes of funding high-priority and urgently necessary resource management programs and operations.

Concessions improvement accounts.—National Park Service agreements with private concessioners providing visitor services within national parks can require concessioners to deposit a portion of gross receipts or a fixed sum of money in a separate bank account. A concessioner may expend funds from such an account at the direction of the park superintendent for facilities that directly support concession visitor services, but would not otherwise be funded through the appropriations process. Concessioners do not accrue possessory interests from improvements funded through these accounts.

Park buildings lease and maintenance fund.—Rental payments for leases to use buildings and associated property in the National Park System are deposited in this account and used for infrastructure needs at park units in accordance with section 802 of Public Law 105–391.

Operation and maintenance of quarters.—Revenues from the rental of Government-owned quarters to park employees are deposited in this account and used to operate and maintain the quarters.

National Maritime Heritage Grants Program.—Of the revenues received from the sale of obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet, 25 percent are used for matching grants to State and local governments and private nonprofit organizations under the National Maritime Heritage Grants Program and for related administrative expenses in accordance with 16 U.S.C. 5401. Program authorization expires at the end of 2006.

Delaware Water Gap, Route 209 operations.—Fees collected for use of Route 209 within the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area by commercial vehicles are used for management, operation, and maintenance of the route within the park as authorized by Public Law 98–63 (97 Stat. 329), section 117 of Public Law 98–151 (97 Stat. 977) as amended by Public Law 99–88 (99 Stat. 343), and section 702 of Division I of Public Law 104–333 (110 Stat. 4185). The expired authorization was restored in fiscal year 1997 by Public Law 104–333.

Glacier Bay National Park resource protection.—Of the revenues received from fees paid by tour boat operators or other permittees for entering Glacier Bay National Park, 60 percent are used for certain activities to protect resources of the Park from harm by permittees in accordance with section 703 of Division I of Public Law 104–333 (110 Stat. 4185).

Filming and photography special use fees.—The National Park Service is now authorized to retain fee receipts that are collected from issuing permits to use park lands and facilities for commercial filming, still photography, and similar activities. Amounts collected should provide a fair return to the Government and may be used in accordance with the formula and purposes established for the Recreational Fee Demonstration Program.

Contributions to U.S. Park Police annuity benefits.—Necessary costs of benefit payments to annuitants under the pension program for United States Park Police officers hired prior to January 1, 1984, established under Public Law 85–157, are paid from the General Fund of the Treasury to the extent the payments exceed deductions from salaries of active duty employees in the program. Permanent funding for such payments was provided in the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2002. Before fiscal year 2002, such payments were funded from appropriations made annually to the National Park Service.

Parkway construction project funds have been derived from the Highway Trust Fund through appropriations to liquidate contract authority, which has been provided under section 104(a)(8) of the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1978, title I of Public Law 95–599, as amended, and appropriation language, which has made the contract authority and the appropriations available until expended.

Reconstruction and relocation of Route 25E through the Cumberland Gap National Historical Park, including construction of a tunnel and the approaches thereto, are authorized without fund limitation by Public Law 93–87, section 160.

Improvements to the George Washington Memorial Parkway and the Baltimore Washington Parkway are authorized and funded by the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Acts, 1987, as included in Public Law 95–591, and 1991, Public Law 101–512. No more significant obligations are expected in this account for these two parkway projects.

The Operation of Indian Programs appropriation consists of a wide range of services and benefits provided to Indian Tribes, Alaskan Native groups, and individual Native Americans.

Tribal priority allocations.—This activity includes the majority of funds used to support ongoing programs at the local Tribal level. Funding priorities for Tribal base programs included in Tribal Priority Allocations are determined by Tribes. Although budget estimates include specific amounts for individual programs, funds may be shifted among programs within the total available for a Tribe or a Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) agency or regional office at the time of budget execution.

Other recurring programs.—This activity includes ongoing programs for which funds are (1) distributed by formula, such as elementary and secondary school operations and Tribal community colleges; and (2) for resource management activities that carry out specific laws or court-ordered settlements.

Non-recurring programs.—This activity includes programs that support Indian reservation and Tribal projects of limited duration, such as noxious weed eradication, cadastral surveys, and forest development.

Central office operations.—This activity supports the executive, program, and administrative management costs of central office organizations, most of which are located in Washington, DC.

Regional office operations.—The BIA has 12 regional offices located throughout the country. Regional Directors have line authority over agency office superintendents. Most of the agency offices are located on Indian reservations. Virtually all of the staff and related administrative support costs for regional and agency offices are included within this activity. Regional Directors have flexibility in aligning their staff and resources to best meet the program requirements of the Tribes within their region.

Special programs and pooled overhead.—Most of the funds in this activity support law enforcement and bureau-wide expenses for items such as unemployment compensation, workers compensation, facilities rentals, telecommunications, and data processing. This activity includes the Bureau's two post-secondary schools, and the Indian police academy, the Indian Arts and Crafts Board, the Indian Integrated Resources Information Program, and non-education facilities operation and maintenance.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

The Bureau of Indian Affairs may carry out the operation of Indian programs by direct expenditure, contracts, cooperative agreements, compacts and grants, either directly or in cooperation with States and other organizations.

Appropriations for the Bureau of Indian Affairs (except the revolving fund for loans, the Indian loan guarantee and insurance fund, and the Indian Guaranteed Loan Program account) shall be available for expenses of exhibits, and purchase of not to exceed 229 passenger motor vehicles, of which not to exceed 187 shall be for replacement only.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds available to the Bureau of Indian Affairs for central office operations or pooled overhead general administration (except facilities operations and maintenance), shall be available for tribal contracts, grants, compacts, or cooperative agreements with the Bureau of Indian Affairs under the provisions of the Indian Self-Determination Act or the Tribal Self-Governance Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-413).

In the event any tribe returns appropriations made available by this Act to the Bureau of Indian Affairs for distribution to other tribes, this action shall not diminish the Federal Government's trust responsibility to that tribe, or the government-to-government relationship between the United States and that tribe, or that tribe's ability to access future appropriations.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds available to the Bureau, other than the amounts provided herein for assistance to public schools under 25 U.S.C. 452 et seq., shall be available to support the operation of any elementary or secondary school in the State of Alaska.

Appropriations made available in this or any other Act for schools funded by the Bureau shall be available only to the schools in the Bureau school system as of September 1, 1996. No funds available to the Bureau shall be used to support expanded grades for any school or dormitory beyond the grade structure in place or approved by the Secretary of the Interior at each school in the Bureau school system as of October 1, 1995. Funds made available under this Act may not be used to establish a charter school at a Bureau-funded school (as that term is defined in section 1146 of the Education Amendments of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 2026)), except that a charter school that is in existence on the date of the enactment of this Act and that has operated at a Bureau-funded school before September 1, 1999, may continue to operate during that period, but only if the charter school pays to the Bureau a pro rata share of funds to reimburse the Bureau for the use of the real and personal property (including buses and vans), the funds of the charter school are kept separate and apart from Bureau funds, and the Bureau does not assume any obligation for charter school programs of the State in which the school is located if the charter school loses such funding. Employees of Bureau-funded schools sharing a campus with a charter school and performing functions related to the charter school's operation and employees of a charter school shall not be treated as Federal employees for purposes of chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code.

Activities financed through the fund are centrally managed operational services and programs, such as: information technology, security, the Diversity Intern Program, Departmental news and information, and safety and health initiatives. Through the NBC, this fund finances the Department's administrative services systems, including: the Federal Personnel and Payroll System (FPPS), Federal Financial System (FFS), and the Interior Department Electronic Acquisitions System (IDEAS). Until October 1, 1994, the United States exercised jurisdiction over the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands according to the terms of the 1947 Trusteeship Agreement between the United States and the Security Council of the United Nations. These responsibilities were carried out by the Department of the Interior.

The Department of the Interior is seeking no additional appropriations for the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. Compacts of Free Association have been implemented with the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and, as of October 1, 1994, the Republic of Palau. Assistance to the Republic of Palau is now contained in the "Compact of Free Association" account.

Remaining funds in the "Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands" account will be used to meet final transition responsibilities of the United States. Outlays from numerous on-going infrastructure construction projects in the Republic of Palau and the other two entities will continue as provided by the Compacts of Free Association and appropriation laws, and will be reported as Trust Territory expenditures until such time as the activities cease.

COMPACT OF FREE ASSOCIATION

For economic assistance and necessary expenses for the Federated States of Micronesia and the Republic of the Marshall Islands as provided in sections 221(a)(3), 221(b), and 233 of the Compact of Free Association, and for economic assistance and necessary expenses for the Republic of Palau as provided in sections 221 (a)(2), 221(b), and 233 of the Compact of Free Association, $16,125,000, to remain available until expended, as authorized by Public Law 99-239 and Public Law 99-658.

Note.—A regular 2003 appropriation for this account had not been enacted at the time the budget was prepared; therefore, this account is operating under a continuing resolution (P.L. 107-229, as amended). The amounts included for 2003 in this budget reflect the Administration's 2003 policy proposals.

The peoples of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia approved Compacts of Free Association negotiated by the United States and their governments. The Compact of Free Association Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-239) constituted the necessary authorizing legislation to make annual payments to the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia. Payments began in 1987 and will continue through fiscal year 2003 when the original economic assistance package expires. Negotiations underway are expected to produce a new assistance agreement that will be implemented in fiscal year 2004. The Administration will transmit legislation that will modify these provisions of the Compact of Free Association Acts.

The Compact of Free Association with the Republic of Palau was implemented under the terms of Public Law 99-658 on October 1, 1994. This compact will provide annual benefits to the Republic totalling an estimated $600 million over the fifteen-year period that began at the implementation date.

In accordance with the Compact of Free Association Act of 1985, the Administration will propose legislation to renew financial assistance for the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia for an additional twenty years. The proposal will also address impact aid for the State of Hawaii and U.S. Pacific island territories affected by immigration provisions in the Compact. The new assistance will emphasize greater accountability by the freely associated states with audit funding provided by the United States.

In 2000, the American Samoa Government (ASG) was authorized to borrow $18.6 million from the U.S. Treasury in order to reduce significant past due debts to vendors. Repayment of the loan is secured and accomplished with funds, as they become due and payable to ASG from the Escrow Account established under the terms and conditions of the Tobacco Master Settlement Agreement. ASG must agree to significant financial reforms as a prerequisite to receiving the loan proceeds.

Under the Natural Resource Damage Assessment and Restoration Fund (Restoration Fund), natural resource damage assessments will be performed in order to provide the basis for claims against responsible parties for the restoration of injured natural resources. Funds are appropriated to conduct damage assessments, restoration, and program management. In addition, funds will be received for the restoration of damaged resources and other activities and for natural resource damage assessments from responsible parties through negotiated settlements or other legal actions by the Department of the Interior.

Restoration activities include: (1) the replacement and enhancement of affected resources; (2) acquisition of equivalent resources and services; and, (3) long-term environmental monitoring and research programs directed to the prevention, containment, and amelioration of hazardous substances and oil spill sites.

The Restoration Fund operates as a departmentwide program, incorporating the interdisciplinary expertise of its various bureaus and offices. Natural resource damage assessments and the restoration of damaged natural resources are authorized by the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, as amended (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.), Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended (33 U.S.C. 1251 et seq.), the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (33 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.), and the Act of July 27, 1990 (16 U.S.C. 19jj et seq.). Since 1992, amounts received by the United States from responsible parties for restoration or reimbursement in settlement of natural resource damages may be deposited in the Fund and shall accrue interest.

EXXON VALDEZ RESTORATION PROGRAM

The budget incorporates the receipts and mandatory spending associated with the civil and criminal settlements related to the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill in the Prince William Sound and surrounding areas. Funding from the settlements, including interest, is provided to Federal and Alaska State natural resource trustee agencies to restore the natural resources and services damaged by the spill. The Exxon Valdez Oil Spill Trustee Council consists of 3 State and 3 Federal trustees who oversee restoration of the injured ecosystem through the use of civil settlement funds. The criminal settlement funds are managed separately by the Federal and Alaska State governments, but are coordinated with the Council.

The Exxon Corporation made the final payment on the $900 million civil settlement in September of 2001. The settlement includes a re-opener provision valid from September 2002 to September 2006, which provides an opportunity for the Trustee governments to claim up to an additional $100 million for natural resource injury that could not have been known or anticipated at the time of settlement.

The civil settlement and interest earned to date total roughly $935 million. Of that amount, $216.4 million reimbursed Exxon and the Federal and State agencies for past response and damage assessment activities. To date, the Trustee Council has spent $363.7 million and committed an additional $40.9 million for habitat protection efforts (land acquisition) on approximately 644,915 acres of land. Another $170.4 million has been used to fund research, monitoring, and marine science-based restoration activities, while $30.8 million has been used for scientific management, public information and participation, and administration. The balance of $112 million is invested in Exxon Valdez Investment Fund, with annual earnings on $25.2 million earmarked for future habitat protection, and annual earnings on $87 million earmarked for the Gulf Ecosystem Monitoring (GEM) program.

Tribal trust funds are deposited into a consolidated account in the U.S. Treasury pursuant to: (1) general or specific acts of Congress and (2) Federal management of Tribal real properties, the titles to which are held in trust for the Tribes by the United States. These funds are available to the respective Tribal groups for various purposes, under various acts of Congress, and are subject to the provisions of Tribal constitutions, bylaws, charters, and resolutions of the various Tribes, bands, or groups.

Commencing with 2000, most Tribal trust funds, including special funds, managed by the Office of Special Trustee were reclassified as non-budgetary. Ownership of these funds did not change, nor did the Federal Government's management responsibilities; changes were made for presentation purposes only. Some Tribal trust funds will remain budgetary, in either this Tribal Special Fund or the Tribal Trust Fund presented later in this section. Funds in the Tribal Special Fund are those not designated in law as a trust, and generally are funds held and invested to carry out obligations of the Secretary of the Interior.

The unobligated balances reflected above include only those assets invested in U.S. Treasury securities; most of the assets of these funds are in investments held outside Treasury.

This consolidated display presents the activities associated with the following accounts:

Cochiti Wetfields Solution.—In 1994, the Army Corps of Engineers transferred $4 million pursuant to P.L. 102-358 to fund the Interior's responsibilities under the settlement agreement between Cochiti Tribe, the Corps, and Interior. The Secretary of the Interior is responsible for maintenance, repair, and replacement of a drainage system constructed by the Corps for the Cochiti Pueblo.

Tribal Economic Recovery Fund.—This fund is authorized by the Three Affiliated Tribes and Standing Rock Sioux Tribe Equitable Compensation Act of 1992 (P.L. 102-575) and holds funds which have been appropriated pursuant to the Act. Beginning in 1998, interest earned on the principal of this fund is available for both Tribes for economic development, education, and social services programs.

Southern Arizona Water Rights Settlement Act.—This Cooperative Fund was established to provide a source of funds to carry out the obligations of the Secretary under sections 303, 304, and 305 of the Act (Title III, P.L. 97-293, 96 Stat. 1274-1285). Only interest accruing to the fund may be expended.

The Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (P.L. 100-497) established the National Indian Gaming Commission as an independent agency within the Department of the Interior. The Commission monitors and regulates gaming activities conducted on Indian lands. Operating costs of the Commission are financed to the greatest extent possible through annual assessments of gaming operations regulated by the Commission. The 2004 request will amend the Commission's current limitation on assessments to enable the amount of fees collected to fluctuate with the number of Indian gaming operations and the total revenues generated by the industry.

The budget assumes that the first oil and gas lease sale in the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) would be held in 2005, resulting in the leasing of 400,000 to 600,000 acres and producing $2.4 billion in receipts from bonuses which would be shared 50/50 between the Federal government and the State of Alaska. The Federal share of the first lease sale bonus bids would be used by the Department of Energy to fund increased renewable energy technology research and development over seven years.

GENERAL PROVISIONS, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

SEC. 201. In order to increase opportunities for Indian tribes to develop, manage, and protect their water resources, in fiscal year 2004 and thereafter, the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, is authorized to enter into grants and cooperative agreements with any Indian tribe, institution of higher education, national Indian organization, or tribal organization pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 6301–6308. (b) EXCEPTIONS.—The provisions of subsection (a) shall not apply if the Secretary of the Interior determines that, for the claim concerned: (1) a patent application was filed with the Secretary on or before September 30, 1994; and (2) all requirements established under sections 2325 and 2326 of the Revised Statutes (30 U.S.C. 29 and

(d) MINERAL EXAMINATIONS.—In order to process patent applications in a timely and responsible manner, upon the request of a patent applicant, the Secretary of the Interior shall allow the applicant to fund a qualified third-party contractor to be selected by the Bureau of Land Management to conduct a mineral examination of the mining claims or mill sites contained in a patent application as set forth in subsection (b). The Bureau of Land Management shall have the sole responsibility to choose and pay the third-party contractor in accordance with the standard procedures employed by the Bureau of Land Management in the retention of third-party contractors.

SEC. 309. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, amounts appropriated to or earmarked in committee reports for the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Indian Health Service by Public Laws 103-138, 103-332, 104-134, 104-208, 105-83, 105-277, 106-113, 106-291, 107-63, and any Act that makes appropriations available for FY 2003 for the Bureau of Indian Affairs or the Indian Health Service for payments to tribes and tribal organizations for contract support costs associated with self-determination or self-governance contracts, grants, compacts, or annual funding agreements with the Bureau of Indian Affairs or the Indian Health Service as funded by such Acts, are the total amounts available for fiscal years 1994 through 2003 for such purposes, except that, for the Bureau of Indian Affairs, tribes and tribal organizations may use their tribal priority allocations for unmet indirect costs of ongoing contracts, grants, self-governance compacts or annual funding agreements.

SEC. 310. In awarding a Federal Contract with funds made available by this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior (the Secretaries) may, in evaluating bids and proposals, give consideration to local contractors who are from, and who provide employment and training for, dislocated and displaced workers in an economically disadvantaged rural community, including those historically timber-dependent areas that have been affected by reduced timber harvesting on Federal lands and other forest-dependent rural communities isolated from significant alternative employment opportunities: Provided, That the contract is for forest hazardous fuels reduction, watershed or water quality monitoring or restoration, wildlife or fish population monitoring, or habitat restoration or management: Provided further, That the terms “rural community” and “economically disadvantaged” shall have the same meanings as in section 2374 of P.L. 101-624: Provided further, That the Secretaries shall develop guidance to implement this section: Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as relieving the Secretaries of any duty under applicable procurement laws, except as provided in this section.

SEC. 311. Of the funds provided to the National Endowment for the Arts:

(1) The Chairperson shall only award a grant to an individual if such grant is awarded to such individual for a literature fellowship, National Heritage Fellowship, or American Jazz Masters Fellowship.

(2) The Chairperson shall establish procedures to ensure that no funding provided through a grant, except a grant made to a State or local arts agency, or regional group, may be used to make a grant to any other organization or individual to conduct activity independent of the direct grant recipient. Nothing in this subsection shall prohibit payments made in exchange for goods and services.

(3) No grant shall be used for seasonal support to a group, unless the application is specific to the contents of the season, including identified programs and/or projects.

SEC. 312. The National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities are authorized to solicit, accept, receive, and invest in the name of the United States, gifts, bequests, or devises of money and other property or services and to use such in furtherance of the functions of the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Any proceeds from such gifts, bequests, or devises, after acceptance by the National Endowment for the Arts or the National Endowment for the Humanities, shall be paid by the donor or the representative of the donor to the Chairman. The Chairman shall enter the proceeds in a special interest-bearing account to the credit of the appropriate endowment for the purposes specified in each case.

SEC. 313. (a) In providing services or awarding financial assistance under the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965 from funds appropriated under this Act, the Chairperson of the National Endowment for the Arts shall ensure that priority is given to providing services or awarding financial assistance for projects, productions, workshops, or programs that serve underserved populations.

(b) In this section:

(1) The term “underserved population” means a population of individuals, including urban minorities, who have historically been outside the purview of arts and humanities programs due to factors such as a high incidence of income below the poverty line or to geographic isolation.

(2) The term “poverty line” means the poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Community Services Block Grant Act (42 U.S.C. 9902(2))) applicable to a family of the size involved.

(c) In providing services and awarding financial assistance under the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965 with funds appropriated by this Act, the Chairperson of the National Endowment for the Arts shall ensure that priority is given to providing services or awarding financial assistance for projects, productions, workshops, or programs that will encourage public knowledge, education, understanding, and appreciation of the arts.

(d) With funds appropriated by this Act to carry out section 5 of the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965-

(1) the Chairperson shall establish a grant category for projects, productions, workshops, or programs that are of national impact or availability or are able to tour several States;

(2) the Chairperson shall not make grants exceeding 15 percent, in the aggregate, of such funds to any single State, excluding grants made under the authority of paragraph (1);

(3) the Chairperson shall report to the Congress annually and by State, on grants awarded by the Chairperson in each grant category under section 5 of such Act; and

(4) the Chairperson shall encourage the use of grants to improve and support community-based music performance and education.

SEC. 314. Section 6(f) of the National Arts and Humanities Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 955(f)) is amended by adding the following after the last sentence: “The Chairperson may approve grants up to $10,000 without regard to this subsection and subsection 10 (c) if in aggregate this amount does not exceed 5 percent of the sums appropriated for grant making purposes per year and such actions are taken pursuant to the terms of an expressed and direct delegation of authority from the Council to the Chairperson”.

SEC. 315. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be expended or obligated to complete and issue the 5-year program under the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act.

SEC. 316. Amounts deposited during fiscal year 2003 in the roads and trails fund provided for in the 14th paragraph under the heading “FOREST SERVICE” of the Act of March 4, 1913 (16 U.S.C. 501), shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture, without regard to the State in which the amounts were derived, to repair or reconstruct roads, bridges, and trails on National Forest System lands or to carry out and administer projects to improve forest health conditions, which may include the repair or reconstruction of roads, bridges, and trails on National Forest System lands in the wildland-community interface where there is an abnormally high risk of fire. The projects shall emphasize reducing risks to human safety and public health and property and enhancing ecological functions, long-term forest productivity, and biological integrity. The projects may be completed in a subsequent fiscal year. Funds shall not be expended under this section to replace funds which would otherwise appropriately be expended from the timber salvage sale fund. Nothing in this section shall be construed to exempt any project from any environmental law.

SEC. 317. A project undertaken by the Forest Service under the Recreation Fee Demonstration Program, as authorized by section 315 of the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 1996, as amended, shall not result in-

(1) displacement of the holder of an authorization to provide commercial recreation services on Federal lands. Prior to initiating any project, the Secretary shall consult with potentially affected holders to determine what impacts the project may have on the holders. Any modifications to the authorization shall be made within the terms and conditions of the authorization and authorities of the affected agency;

(2) the return of a commercial recreation service to the Secretary for operation when such services have been provided in the past by a private sector provider, except when—

(A) the private sector provider fails to bid on such opportunities;

(B) the private sector provider terminates its relationship with the agency; or

(C) the agency revokes the permit for non-compliance with the terms and conditions of the authorization.

In such cases, the agency may use the Recreation Fee Demonstration Program to provide for operations until a subsequent operator can be found through the offering of a new prospectus.

SEC. 318. REVISION OF FOREST PLANS. Prior to October 1, 2004, the Secretary of Agriculture shall not be considered to be in violation of subparagraph 6(f)(5)(A) of the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act of 1974 (16 U.S.C. 1604(f)(5)(A)) solely because more than 15 years have passed without revision of the plan for a unit of the National Forest System. Nothing in this section exempts the Secretary from any other requirement of the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act (16 U.S.C. 1600 et seq.) or any other law: Provided, That if the Secretary is not acting expeditiously and in good faith, within the funding available, to revise a plan for a unit of the National Forest System, this section shall be void with respect to such plan and a court of proper jurisdiction may order completion of the plan on an accelerated basis.

SEC. 319. Until September 30, 2004, the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture to enter into a cooperative agreement under the first section of Public Law 94-148 (16 U.S.C. 565a-1) for a purpose described in such section includes the authority to use that legal instrument when the principal purpose of the resulting relationship is to the mutually significant benefit of the Forest Service and the other party or parties to the agreement, including nonprofit entities.

SEC. 320. No funds provided in this Act may be expended to conduct preleasing, leasing and related activities under either the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.) or the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.) within the boundaries of a National Monument established pursuant to the Act of June 8, 1906 (16 U.S.C. 431 et seq.) as such boundary existed on January 20, 2001, except where such activities are allowed under the Presidential proclamation establishing such monument.

SEC. 321. In entering into agreements with foreign countries pursuant to the Wildfire Suppression Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 1856m), the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior are authorized to enter into reciprocal agreements in which the individuals furnished under said agreements to provide wildfire services are considered, for purposes of tort liability, employees of the country receiving said services when the individuals are engaged in fire suppression: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture or the Secretary of the Interior shall not enter into any agreement under this provision unless the foreign country, either directly or through its fire organization, agrees to assume any and all liability for the acts or omissions of American firefighters engaged in firefighting in a foreign country: Provided further, That when an agreement is reached for furnishing fire fighting services, the only remedies for acts or omissions committed while fighting fires shall be those provided under the laws of the host country, and those remedies shall be the exclusive remedies for any claim arising out of fighting fires in a foreign country: Provided further, That neither the sending country nor any organization associated with the firefighter shall be subject to any legal action whatsoever pertaining to or arising out of the firefighter's role in fire suppression.

SEC. 322. Section 124(a) of the Department of the Interior and Related Appropriations Act, 1997 (16 U.S.C. 1011(a)), as amended, is further amended by inserting after the phrase, "appropriations made for the Bureau of Land Management" the phrase "including appropriations for the Wildland Fire Management account allocated to the National Park Service, Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs,".

SEC. 323. Funding provided in this Act for "conservation spending category activities" shall, for the purpose of discretionary spending limits, be deemed to be included in the conservation spending category defined in section 250 (c)(4)(E) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended.

Planning and Management.—The Department's formal information technology (IT) investment management policy and process ensures that investment decisions are aligned with the strategic goals of the Department, are well-planned and justified, and fit within the Department's overall IT strategy and enterprise architecture, and are managed effectively throughout the life cycle. The resources included in this request will be applied to improving the management of IT projects through a variety of means, including: more structured and detailed reviews by the Department's CIO of component projects; improved financial and performance reporting; and a more standardized systems development life cycle methodology and program management model.

Joint Automated Booking System.—The Joint Automated Booking System (JABS) performs three major functions: (1) facilitates rapid identification of individuals under arrest or detention through automation of the booking process and an interface with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) fingerprint identification system; (2) minimizes duplication of data entry by multiple law enforcement agencies during the booking process, and; (3) promotes data sharing of arrest records among JABS participants and other interested parties. When implemented, JABS will provide a rapid conduit to the FBI for offender identification and a current, nationwide reference for criminal offenders, arrests, cases and related data to aid in criminal investigations and prosecutions.

IDENT/IAFIS Integration.—The Automated Biometric Identification System/Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System (IDENT/IAFIS) integration project is designed to support the apprehension and prosecution of criminal aliens and to provide state and local law enforcement personnel with direct access to Border and Transportation Security (BTS) data through IAFIS. With a real-time connection between the two systems, IDENT/IAFIS integration will provide BTS the capability to determine whether an apprehended person is the subject of a currently posted Want/Warrant or has a record in the FBI's-Criminal Master File. Collaterally, the integration of IDENT and IAFIS will enable cognizant law enforcement agencies to obtain all relevant immigration information as part of a criminal history response from a single FBI search request. IDENT/IAFIS integration is proceeding in an incremental manner with a careful attention to the technical aspects as well as the programmatic and operational effects associated with the project before initiating the full scale development and implementation of the integrated system.

Information Technology Security.—The Department has established minimum requirements for ensuring the security of its classified and Sensitive But Unclassified systems and networks. The resources included in this request will assign responsibility for IT security to a senior executive, develop a security architecture, implement common security tools and develop a Public Key Infrastructure.

Note.—Includes $3 million in budget authority in 2003 and 2004 for activities of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives transferred in 2003 from the Department of Treasury. A similar amount is included in 2002 for consistency of presentation.

Resources are proposed to provide funding for the Department of Justice conversion of its wireless radio communications to narrowband operations. Federal Government agencies are required by 47 U.S.C. 903(d)(1) to make more efficient use of their radio spectrum. The National Telecommunications and Information Administration's implementing regulations require that all Federal spectrum users narrow, by one-half, the bandwidth used to transmit radio signals by the year 2005 for Very High Frequency (VHF) allocations and 2008 for Ultra High Frequency (UHF) allocations. The Department's 2004 budget continues the implementation of the Integrated Wireless Network (IWN), a joint initiative with the Departments of Treasury and Homeland Security. Requested resources will be allocated to support Justice components' existing legacy land mobile radio systems; support IWN operations and maintenance requirements; invest in new narrowband infrastructure and subscriber equipment; and support management and operating requirements of the Joint Wireless Program Management Office.

The Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act (CALEA) of 1994 authorizes the Attorney General to reimburse telecommunications carriers for costs associated with modifying digital equipment installed before January 1, 1995, in order that court-authorized wiretaps may be performed.

The Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1997 (P.L. 104-208) extended eligibility for reimbursement to telecommunications equipment manufacturers and providers of support services. In addition to direct appropriations to the Fund, Congress authorized Federal agencies with law enforcement and intelligence responsibilities to transfer to the Fund unobligated balances that are available until expended, upon compliance with Congressional notification requirements.

With the appropriations provided in 2001, total funding for the program has reached $500 million, the authorization level provided in the Act.

This program includes the Office of the Pardon Attorney (OPA) and the Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR). The Pardon Attorney receives and reviews all petitions for clemency, i.e., commutation of sentences and pardons. The Executive Office for Immigration Review contains the Immigration Judge function, the Board of Immigration Appeals, the Office of the Chief Administrative Hearing Officer, and the Office of Management and Administration. EOIR was established January 1, 1983, to improve the immigration hearing and appeal process.

The Detention Trustee reports to the Deputy Attorney General and is responsible for the centralized management of the Department detention resource allocations, to include the Cooperative Agreement Program, exercising financial oversight of detention operations, and ensuring the implementation of efficiency and effectiveness improvements in Department detention operations.

For FY 2004, the Detention Trustee will continue to work with state governments, local governments, and private service providers to maintain adequate detention capacity to house detained individuals charged with federal offenses, detained while awaiting trial or sentencing, a hearing on their immigration status, or deportation. Based on anticipated growth rates in the federal detainee population, during FY 2003/FY 2004 the number of detainees in state, local, and private prisons is expected to represent approximately 75 percent of the federally detained population. These working relationships, with state, local, and private prison providers are paramount to carrying out the function of detention and also save on costly capital development of federal facilities.

In view of this anticipated growth, and the current excess of state, local and private prison bed space, DOJ has formed a special working group to evaluate such opportunities. This working group consists of representatives from the Office of the Federal Detention Trustee (OFDT), Border and Transportation Security, the United States Marshal Service (USMS), and the Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP). OFDT serves as the lead. The group's principal objective is to ensure that excess state and local prison facilities are fairly and thoroughly evaluated and consistent standards are employed in these evaluations. The working group considers the location of the facility, size and security level (including flexibility in security level), assesses short-term and long-term bed space requirements, and the amount and status of bed space already available in the vicinity of the facility being reviewed.

The National Clearinghouse for Detention Space, which serves as a national repository for state and local governments and private detention bed space providers to electronically post vacancies rates, services, administrative costs, availability and mode of transport and medical services, will assist the working group in quickly and easily identifying available detention bed space.

In FY 2003, OFDT completed two regional detention pilot projects, one in the Midwest and one along the Southwest border, for process improvements in the areas of consolidation and oversight of federal detention. In FY 2004, successful common elements of the pilot projects will be implemented by OFDT in other areas of the country.

Note.—Includes $5 million in budget authority in 2003 and 2004 for activities of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives transferred in 2003 from the Department of Treasury. A similar amount is included in 2002 for consistency of presentation.

The Office of the Inspector General (OIG) was statutorily established in the Department of Justice on April 14, 1989. The OIG investigates alleged violations of criminal and civil laws, regulations, and ethical standards arising from the conduct of the Department's employees. The OIG provides leadership and assists management in promoting integrity, economy, efficiency, and effectiveness within the Department and in its financial, contractual, and grant relationships with others. Also by statute, the OIG reports to the Attorney General, Congress, and the public on a semiannual basis regarding its significant activities.

The Audit function is responsible for independent audits and reviews of Department organizations, programs, functions, computer security and information technology systems, and financial statement audits. The Audit function also conducts or reviews external audits of expenditures made under Department contracts, grants, and other agreements.

The Investigations function investigates allegations of civil rights violations, bribery, fraud, abuse and violations of other laws, rules and procedures that govern Department employees, contractors, and grantees. This function also develops these cases for criminal prosecution, civil action, or administrative action. In some instances the OIG refers allegations to components within the Department and requests notification of their findings and of any disciplinary action taken.

The Evaluation and Inspections function conducts analyses and makes recommendations to decision makers for improvements in Department programs, policies, and procedures. In addition, this function also conducts shorter and more time-sensitive reviews and evaluations to provide managers with early warnings about possible program deficiencies.

The Oversight and Review function investigates allegations of significant interest to the American public and Congress and of vital importance to the Department.

The Executive Direction and Control function provides program direction for the OIG. Responsibilities include policy development, legal counsel, Congressional affairs, planning, budget, finance, personnel, procurement, automated data processing, and general support services.

The United States Parole Commission makes decisions to grant or deny parole to Federal and D.C. Code prisoners serving sentences of one year and a day or more, sets conditions of parole, supervises parolees and mandatory releasees, recommits parolees in the event of violations of the conditions of supervision, and determines the termination of supervision in accordance with the Parole Commission and Reorganization Act of 1976.

In addition, the Commission seeks to improve the rehabilitation process by monitoring an effective parole supervision program through U.S. and District of Columbia probation officers and through research studies that evaluate the effectiveness of parole programs. During 2000, the U.S. Parole Commission assumed responsibility for parole revocation hearings and supervision of District of Columbia parolees under the National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act (P.L. 105-33).

The Federal Government is represented in each of the 94 judicial districts and the District of Columbia Superior Court by a U.S. Marshal. The primary missions of the U.S. Marshals Service are protection of the Federal judiciary, protection of witnesses, execution of warrants and court orders, and custody and transportation of unsentenced prisoners. It is the principal support force in the Federal judicial system and an integral part of the Federal law enforcement community.

Reimbursable program.—Federal funds in 2004 are derived primarily from the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts for the court security program and inspectors for court security, the Assets Forfeiture Fund for seized assets management, the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Program for multi-agency drug investigations, the U.S. Air Force for the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile Program for transportation security services provided by the U.S. Marshals Service, and the Office of National Drug Control Policy and the Centers for Disease Control for security services. Non-Federal funds are derived from State and local governments for witness protection and for the transportation of prisoners pursuant to State writs and from fees collected from service of civil process and sales associated with judicial orders.

FEES AND EXPENSES OF WITNESSES—Continued

This appropriation is used to pay fees and expenses to witnesses who appear on behalf of the Government in litigation in which the United States is a party. Factors over which the Department of Justice has little, or no, control affect the costs incurred. The U.S. Attorneys, the U.S. Marshals, and the Department's six litigating divisions are served by this appropriation.

This program also pays the fees of physicians and psychiatrists who examine accused persons upon order of the court to determine their mental competency.

Protection of witnesses.—Pays subsistence and other costs to ensure the safety of Government witnesses whose testimony on behalf of the United States places them or their families in jeopardy.

Victim compensation fund.—Pays restitution to any victim of a crime committed by a protected witness who causes or threatens death or serious bodily injury.

Private counsel.—Pays private counsel retained to represent Government employees who are sued, charged, or subpoenaed for actions taken while performing their official duties (private counsel expenditures may be authorized for congressional testimony as well as for litigation in instances where government counsel is precluded from representing the employee or private counsel is otherwise appropriate);

D.C. Court Informant Protection.—Pays for the short term protection and temporary relocation of informants for the District of Columbia Superior Court.

Alternative Dispute Resolution.—Pays the costs of providing Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) services in instances wherein the Department has taken the initiative to use such services and in those matters wherein the courts have directed the parties to attempt a settlement using mediation or some other ADR process.

United States trustee system fund.—The United States trustees supervise the administration of bankruptcy cases and private trustees in the Federal Bankruptcy Courts. The Bankruptcy Judges, U.S. Trustees and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-554) expanded the pilot trustee program to a twenty-one region, nationwide program encompassing 88 judicial districts. This program collects user fees assessed against debtors, which offset the annual appropriation.

The Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 established the Assets Forfeiture Fund, into which forfeited cash and the proceeds of sales of forfeited property are deposited. Authorities of the fund have been amended by various public laws enacted since 1984. Under current law, authority to use the fund for certain investigative expenses shall be specified in annual appropriation acts. Expenses necessary to seize, detain, inventory, safeguard, maintain, advertise or sell property under seizure are funded through a permanent, indefinite appropriation. In addition, beginning in 1993, other general expenses of managing and operating the asset forfeiture program are paid from the permanent, indefinite portion of the fund. Once all expenses are covered, and statutorily mandated transfers are accomplished, the balance is maintained to meet ongoing expenses of the program. Excess unobligated balances may also be allocated by the Attorney General in accordance with 28 U.S.C. 524(c)(8)(E).

Note. Includes $112 million in budget authority in 2004 for Interagency Crime and Drug Enforcement activities proposed for transfer from the Departments of Treasury and Homeland Security. Comparable amounts for 2002 and 2003 are shown in the Department of the Treasury, Interagency Crime and Drug Enforcement ($108 million) and Coast Guard ($1 million).

This appropriation provides reimbursements to agencies within the Department of Justice, Department of Treasury, and Department of Homeland Security that participate in the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF) Program. The OCDETF Program consists of a nationwide structure of 9 regional task forces that combine the resources and expertise of its 11 member Federal agencies, in cooperation with State and local investigators and prosecutors, to target and destroy major narcotic trafficking and money-laundering organizations. The task forces perform the following activities:

1. Investigation.—This activity includes the resources for direct investigative intelligence and support activities of the task forces, focusing on the disruption and dismantlement of drug trafficking and money laundering organizations by various organized crime enterprises. Organizations participating under the law enforcement function are the Drug Enforcement Administration, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Internal Revenue Service, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives, U.S. Coast Guard, U.S. Marshals Service, and Border and Transportation Security.

2. Prosecution.—This activity includes the resources for the prosecution of cases generated through the investigative efforts of task force agents. Litigation efforts are targeted selectively on the criminal leadership involved in drug trafficking and are intended to dissolve organized illicit enterprises. This includes activities designed to secure the seizure and forfeiture of the assets of these enterprises. Participating agencies are the U.S. Attorneys, Criminal Division and Tax Division.

The planned distribution of obligations for 2003 and 2004 among the participating Federal agencies, as well as the actual distribution for 2002, is as follows:

At the request of the Attorney General, the OCDETF member agencies, working together with input from the intelligence community, developed the Consolidated Priority Organization Target (CPOT) List which identifies the 53 most significant international drug trafficking and money laundering organizations responsible for the largest drug supply to the United States. OCDETF has identified 369 current OCDETF investigations that are targeting components of the CPOT-listed organizations. The focus on CPOT-linked investigations is one of many steps taken by the OCDETF program to enhance and expand its investigations across the United States. The goal is to dismantle the entire infrastructure of these major drug trafficking and money laundering organizations, thereby reducing the drug supply to the United States. This sharply focused effort ensures that OCDETF funding is being used as effectively and efficiently as possible. It should result in an increase of linked CPOT investigations by 33 percent in FY 2003.

As OCDETF has renewed its focus on the higher level targets and investigations, the total OCDETF cases initiated decreased by 33 percent (1,336 to 895) between FY 2001 and FY 2002. This has occurred because OCDETF resources are being concentrated on more sophisticated, more long-term and resource-intensive investigations, thereby reducing the number of investigations which are undertaken. The decrease is also attributed to the decrease in drug enforcement resources available to OCDETF member agency resources due to the build-up in counter-terrorism programs after September 11, 2001. During FY 2003, it is projected that OCDETF case initiations will continue to decrease by additional 10 percent (895 to 800). However, rather than being a cause for alarm, OCDETF believes this decrease in cases initiated will be indicative of our emphasis on "quality investigations" rather than the quantity of investigations.

The mission of the FBI is to protect the United States from terrorist and foreign intelligence activities; to uphold the law through the investigation of violations of Federal criminal law; to provide leadership and assistance to Federal, state, local and international law enforcement agencies; and to perform these responsibilities in a manner that is responsive to the needs of the public and is faithful to the Constitution of the United States.

Protecting America in the current challenging national security and criminal environment requires that the FBI refocus its priorities; realign its workforce to address these priorities; and improve management policies and operating procedures to enhance flexibility, agility, effectiveness, and accountability. The FBI's revised strategic priorities are in order:

- Protect the United States from terrorist attack.
- Protect the United States against foreign intelligence operations and espionage.
- Protect the United States against cyber-based attacks and high technology crimes.
- Combat public corruption at all levels of government.
- Protect civil rights.
- Combat transnational and national criminal organizations and enterprises.
- Combat major white-collar crime.
- Combat significant violent crime.
- Support federal, state, county, municipal, and international partners.

- Upgrade technology to successfully perform the FBI's mission.

FBI investigations and operations are conducted through a network of 56 major field offices, over 400 smaller field offices (resident agencies), and 4 information technology centers located throughout the United States and Puerto Rico; the FBI Academy and engineering complex at Quantico, Virginia; a fingerprint identification and criminal justice information services center in Clarksburg, West Virginia; 45 foreign liaison posts; and FBI Headquarters in Washington, D.C.

A number of FBI activities are carried out on a reimbursable basis. Since 1997, the FBI has been reimbursed for investigations of health care fraud and abuse as provided by the Health Care Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-191). Additionally, the FBI is reimbursed for its participation in Interagency Crime and Drug Enforcement programs and by other Federal agencies for certain investigative services, such as pre-employment background inquiries and fingerprint and name checks. The FBI also is authorized to conduct fingerprint and name checks for certain non-federal agencies.

For FY 2004, $539 million in enhancements are proposed. These enhancements support operations, information technology, security, and infrastructure needs. Highlights of these initiatives include: (1) enhanced counterterrorism capabilities; (2) enhanced counterintelligence programs; (3) enhanced capability for cyber crimes investigations; (4) improved security for FBI personnel, facilities, and information; and (5) improved information technology.

The budget presentation reflects two proposals that are central to the FBI's efforts to effectively and efficiently achieve its new priorities:

- A budget structure that has been reduced from 10 program areas to 4 major functions—Counterterrorism, National Security, Criminal Enterprises/Federal Crimes, and Criminal Justice Services.
  - The allocation to these 4 programs includes a share of the cost of information technology, laboratory services, executive management, and other activities that support multiple programs.
- These two proposals will provide several benefits:
